Nixon's lawyer says defense will depend on hush money role

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's chief lawyer says the President's defense against impeachment depends on whether Nixon himself was involved in hush money payments to Watergate defendants.

James D. St. Clair, White House special counsel, said Sunday the presidential tape transcripts released last week prove Nixon neither authorized nor knew of the payments and thus is innocent of any "criminal plot to obstruct justice."

St. Clair also said he considers it unrealistic to think that a constitutional dispute between Congress and the President over what amounts to an impeachable offense could be resolved in court.

In another televised interview, White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. said he hopes the leading members of the House Judiciary Committee will personally listen to the White House tapes and verify the transcripts.

Nixon said in releasing the material that Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., and Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, the senior committee Republican, could hear the actual tapes at the White House. They have not yet accepted the offer.

Haig said anyone who reads the transcripts "knows without a shadow of a doubt that there has not been much tampering with the contents of them. They speak for themselves."

Haig declined to reply directly to questions about whether the White House also would turn over evidence sought on issues other than Watergate, such as the milk fund, the ITT case and a $100,000 would-be campaign contribution by Howard Hughes.

But he added that these "are legitimate questions and for people involved to do any less than their best, they would, of course, be remiss."

Meanwhile, two members of the House panel warned against interpreting the committee's party-line vote on the transcripts as a sign of a partisan split on the impeachment issue.

After receiving edited transcripts from the White House instead of the actual tape recordings, the committee voted 20 to 18 last week to inform Nixon he had not complied fully with its subpoena.

"Few if any really thought he was in full compliance," said Rep. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md. "The difference in opinion was in the proper response."

5 thefts reported to police

Five thefts were reported to police over the weekend, including thefts of a stereo set, television set and box of tools.

Birdie West, 203 Adams St., told police that between 10 p.m. Friday and 1:40 a.m. Saturday thieves entered the home and took a stereo set valued at $250 and a portable black and white television set valued at $118.

Police said the thieves apparently broke open a window on the south side of the house to get in.

Lee Haines, 600 Allen Blvd., told police two tires and a speaker were taken from his car while it was parked behind Sikeston Motor Co. on South Main Street between 1 p.m. Friday and 12:34 p.m. Saturday. Haines valued the losses at $199.

Police said a money changer was broken open at Kwiki Car Wash, 838 Tanner St., and four quarters were taken. Damage to the money changer was placed at $235.

Bill Gromer, 131 N. Frisco St., told police that a tool box and tools were taken from the back of his pickup truck between 1:30 and 2:10 a.m. Saturday while the truck was parked at South Side Cafe on South Main Street. No value was placed on the tools, police said.

Joyce Allen, 406 Illinois Ave., reported to police that a pair of overalls was taken from her car while it was parked at ther home between midnight and 9 a.m. Saturday. The overalls were valued at $24.

Shooting victim didn't realize where he was

Police said today that Bradie Bledsoe, 46, who was arrested Friday afternoon after being shot in the foot while forcing his way into the Sylvester Murphy Home, 227 Luther St., apparently did not realize what he was doing.

Police said Bledsoe had been drinking and apparently thought he was at a different house.

Police investigation showed there was no criminal intent in his actions.

Bledsoe was shot by Mrs. Murphy after he entered through the kitchen door.

Peace disturbance charges were filed against Bledsoe this morning by Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore.

Police also announced 10 other weekend arrests, which included:

Clyde E. Freeland, 606 N. Main St., assault and battery; Dave Carthur Smith, 731 Greer St., peace disturbance; Larry Dale Lambert, Pine Motel, assault and battery; Bernard Gross of Bell City Route One, careless and imprudent driving; Wesley Herman Runnels, Route Three, speeding.

Action on Householder is deferred until tonight

NEW MADRID-- Action to remove Marshal O. E. Householder from office has been deferred by the present City Council until after he takes the oath of office tonight and assumes a new two- year term to which he was elected without opposition on April 2.

The decision to defer was made in a special closed meeting Friday from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., which was attended by incoming mayor Jim Cravens and two newly elected aldermen, Joe Hunter and George Dawson.

Whether or not the proceeding will be continued against the marshal will be determined by the new City Council, which will be formed tonight when Cravens succeeds Mayor Robert A. Riley and Hunter and Dawson replace Aldermen Bob Blom and W. R. Phillips Jr., respectively.

Initial steps for impeachment proceedings were taken on April 22 when Riley recommended that Householder be removed from office following a fracus on April 21 between the marshal and Alderman Ras Jones.

Householder and Jones became involved in a fight outside a New Madrid tavern in which Householder allegedly fired a gun and both men were injured. Householder was off duty and reportedly both men had been drinking.

The motion for deferment of action was made by alderman Bill Boyd, seconded by Phillips and unanimously agreed to by the board of aldermen.

Others present at the meeting were Mayor Riley, City Attorney Hal E. Hunter Jr., City Clerk Pauline Allen, and Aldermen Jones, Blom and John A. Hunter. Alderman Ed LaValle was out of town.

The 20- year veteran marshal had previously been notified to appear with witnesses before the City Council at 8 p.m. Friday to show cause why action for his removal from office should not be taken.

Householder has posted $1,000 bond, pending Magistrate Court proceedings against him on a felonious assault charge filed upon complaint by Jones.

Drowning victim found

NEW HAMBURG — The body of Thomas Anthony Glastetter, 19, was recovered from Heisserer's Lake one mile north of New Hamburg along Highway 61 at 11 p.m. Friday, eight hours after a canoe capsized and dumped him and a compansion, David Zeigler of Illmo, into the water.

Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said Glastetter and Zeigler were in the canoe while a third member of the party, Jim Smith of Chaffee, waited on the shore. When the canoe capsized and the two young men were left floundering in the water, Smith took a john boat and attempted to get to the spot where the boat overturned about 100 yards from shore.

Glastetter climbed onto the overturned boat, and Smith tried to get to Zeigler to help him to shore. Zeigler either was helped or floated to shore, but Glastetter slipped from the boat or tried to swim to shore and disappeared.

Searchers from the sheriff's office, the Sikeston Volunteer Emergency Rescue Unit, Scott City police, Sikeston police and Cape Girardeau County sheriff's department dragged the lake until the body was recovered by John Forrest of Sikeston and Patrick Buehrle of Columbia.

The body was located in about 20 feet of water about 30 yards from shore.

During the dragging operation the surface of lake was illuminated like daylight by portable lighting equipment brought to the scene by Ray Clinton Construction Co. of Sikeston.

Scott County Coroner Gene Nunnelee ruled that death was caused by accidental drowning.

Funeral services for Glastetter were conducted at 10 a.m. today in St. Ambrose Catholic Church at Chaffee by the Rev. James Holmes, pastor.

Burial was in the church cemetery.

Pallbearers were Jim Smith, Jim Harper, Tim Stiemle, Richard Hodge, Elmer Enderle and Roger Glueck.

Born May 18, 1954, he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Glastetter, who survive.

Glastetter was a 1972 graduate of Chaffee High School, where he was a star football player and won all-state recognition as a defensive tackle.

He was employed as a cutter at the Thorngate Ltd. plant in Chaffee and was a member of St. Ambrose Catholic Church.

On June 30, 1973, he married Darla Cobb of Chaffee, who survives.

Also surviving are seven brothers, Stanley and Leslie Glastetter of Chaffee and Tim, Bryan, Barry, Carl and Eric Glastetter of the home; one sister, Mrs. Charles Wipsler of Jackson; and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. George Glueck of Chaffee.

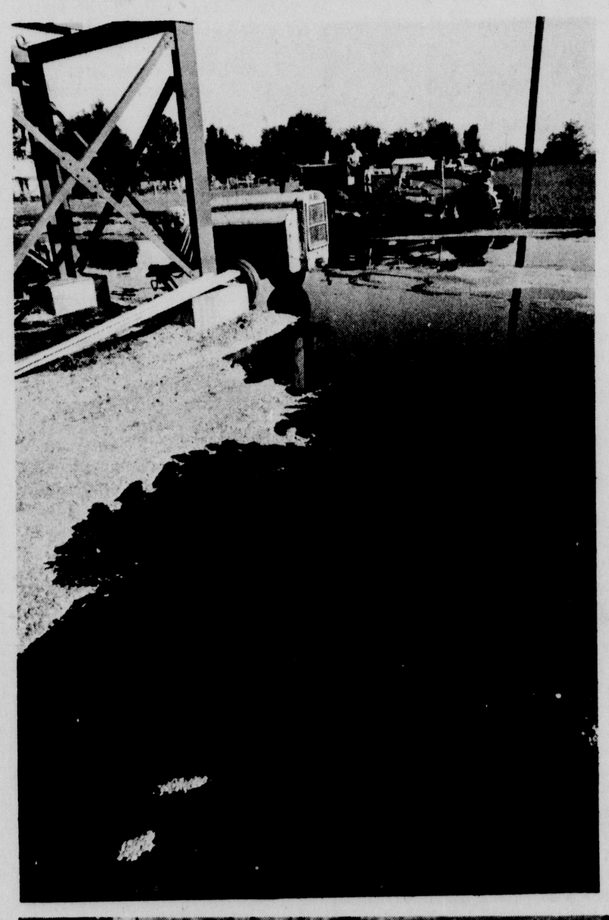
Prisoner sets fire to pillow

A prisoner set fire to a pillow at 10:35 p.m. Sunday in the city jail, filling the cell area with dense smoke, according to police.

Officer Tommy Green said he discovered the trouble after a prisoner yelled fire and Green opened the door to find the area filled with smoke.

Green said he discovered the burning pillow outside one of the cells while he was moving the prisoners to safety. Police said they have not determined which prisoners set the pillow on fire.

A fire truck was not sent to the jail, but Fire Chief Larry Linnemeyer said it took his department's smoke ejector about an hour and a half to clear the area of smoke.



Asphalt spills

DUCK HUNTERS ARISE

Inflation and Wategate get the headlines. But seething behind them in Washington is an issue that is important to you if you happen to be one of the millions of American sportsmen who enjoy hauling out the scattergun each fall and going after ducks and geese.

The Department of Interior, if it gets its way, intends to change the pattern of waterfowl hunting across the country by forcing all shooters to use steel instead of lead shot. The reason, according to the Department, is that thousands of ducks and geese are fatally poisoned each year by lead shotgun pellets which they scoop up from marshbottoms as they forage for food.

The hitch, however, is that the problem of lead poisoning is almost wholly confined to two of the nation's four corridors, known as "flyways," where ducks and geese fly and feed when migrating. Problem areas are the Atlantic Flyway and — to a lesser extent — the Mississippi Flyway. The other two flyways, Central and Pacific, are free of the problem except for isolated feeding areas.

State fish and game officials in the Central and Pacific Flyways — which cover the western half of the United States — argue convincingly that they should be allowed to correct the problem in the few cases where it exists, rather than being forced to participate in a national solution to a problem that is not national in scope.

Opponents of the steel shot proposal, which is still pending a final decision by Interior Department officials, argue that the harder pellets will be more expensive, will damage shotguns, and will be less effective in killing waterfowl. In a recent press release, the Department admitted that, at a range greater than about 45 yards, "steel shot is likely to be less effective than lead." One certain consequence of using steel rather than lead shotgun pellets would be that more waterfowl would be crippled rather than cleanly killed.

Sen. James A. McClure (R-Idaho) has introduced a bill to prohibit the Interior Department from issuing any order regarding the use of steel shot for waterfowl until the issue can be studied in public hearings before the Senate Interior Committee. We urge approval of Sen. McClure's bill.

WAIT A MINUTE!

Proposals are in the works to add about 52 million acres of the nation's forest lands to the 10 million acres already set aside as single - use wilderness acres. In this instance, single use means primarily for recreational purposes. According to a timber industry authority, "This is equivalent to about 12 per cent of all commercial forest land in the United States."

Before setting aside millions of additional acres of timberland in nonproductive preserves, the timber company spokesman recommends certain steps. These include state- by- state land use studies. These studies would produce reliable estimates of demands for forest products, for urban and industrial development, for highways, power lines and for all forms of outdoor recreation. He proposes that such studies be standardized for the whole country so state- by - state figures can be put together to provide regional and national summaries. He urges that until such studies are complete, all presently proposed federal changes in land use be held in abeyance.

Timberland, like nearly every other productive activity and resource in the country, has been a victim of what amounts to a blind crusade aimed directly at immobilizing intelligent efforts of governmental and business leaders to balance the needs of people with the requirements of conservation and preservation. The timber industry has become one of the most progressive enterprises in the latter respect. As the timber spokesman comments, "... the forests of America are probably in better health, growing more wood fiber, better protected from serious loss by fire, and contributing more to the health and welfare of the nation than ever before ..." Wise management, not emotional crusades, is destined to be the savior of America's resources.

PEOPLE BRANDING

The Senate Finance Committee has proposed that all children entering the first grade after January 1, 1974, must be assigned Social Security numbers. The purpose of the proposal sounds plausible. It is to prevent Social Security swindlers from applying under more than one name for welfare checks.

An old- fashioned editor comments that, "... designating an individual, from childhood to death, by a single identification number has connotations alien to traditional American liberty. Not only could a computer spew out a person's life history at the pushing of a button, but the trend away from personal identity ... would be accelerated."

If we are to submit to such a philosophy of people watching, we may one day see the government following a practice similar to the calf branding used by western cattlemen. For example, a law could require that each child's number be tatooed on its right shoulder at birth — or left if the bureaucrats so desired. Such a law would probably end freedom, but it sure would solve all identity problems and virtually guarantee that government handouts would go to the righ people.

IN PRAISE OF PAPERS POOPERS

A survey by Scripps - Howard News Service of the records of the federal government's General Services Administration reveals that President Nixon was hardly alone in claiming a tax deduction for his personal papers.

Lyndon B. Johnson, both as president and vice president, former vice president Hubert Humphrey, Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, cabinet members, presidential advisors and a host of top- and middle - echelon officials in the last five national administrations, as well as three journalists and authors, made tax-deductible donations of their papers between 1963 and 1969 to the National Archives, presidential libraries or local historical societies.

The matter would be academic now, since Congress abolished this provision of the tax laws effective July 25, 1969, except that it is an example of how the spreading stain of Watergate has touched people not even remotely connected with that scandal.

Then, too, there is the very live question of the propriety, if not the legality, of President Nixon's gift of his vice presidential papers which a joint congressional committee is looking into, at his request.

Were it not for Watergate, it is unlikely that any of this information would ever have become public knowledge. Even if it had, were it not for Watergate again, it is unlikely that much ado would have been made about it.

But whatever the term "Watergate" comes to signify in the history books, for the present generation of Americans it has brought an acutely heightened sensitivity to the ethical behavior of government officials.

The ordinary citizen may well ask why men who were elected or appointed to positions of public trust and prominence should ever have been permitted tax write-offs for materials they acquired simply by virtue of attaining such positions. Documents accumulated in the public service ought to belong to the public — period.

It is interesting to note that the Scripps- Howard list contains no names of representatives or senators donating personal papers, which may be one reason why Congress eventually abolished this particular "loophole."

However it came about, it is well that the practice is ended.

One of the fallacies we live by, according to the American Economic Foundation, is that economic controls can cure inflation. But there's an old Chinese proverb which states, "He who rides a tiger dismounts at his own peril." In other words, it's easier to start than to stop. And that's true with government controls.

Most controls are urged by special interest groups who pressure the government into selective economic programs. But historically, controls have never worked. It's like trying to move a single marble in a jar full of marbles. Each leans on the other.

Every economic action brings on reaction followed by still other reactions. For example, we sold too much grain to Russia last year. That created a domestic shortage which drove up the cost of feed for cattle and chickens which were under price controls.

With reduced profits in sight, ranchers cut back production. This in turn put price pressure on pork and fish which were not controlled. Thus, the marbles moves and moved to no one's benefit.

The simple cure for shortages and high prices is to permit the law of supply and demand to work. In a free economy it doesn't take long for suppliers to enter a market where profits are available.

The most unchangeable factor in economics is human nature. Man is profit oriented. When denied the freedom to earn as much as possible, man's performance is reduced. But when allowed to develop his maximum income, he can often work economic miracles.

Unfortunately, making the world better for someone else but not yourself is hardly conducive to great effort. It's also difficult for a politician to tell people who are chafing under high prices that the solution is to let prices become temporarily higher.

Tenants of an apartment building were disturbed one night by sounds of someone running in the apartment above. The noise stopped after a few minutes, but occurred on the next two nights.

On the fourth night, instead of the noise of running, there was a series of heavy thuds and thumps. The angry tenant marched upstairs, pounded on the door of the apartment and demanded of the woman who came to the door to know what was going on.

"I wish people would mind their own business," said the woman. "My husband has been ill and the doctor gave him some medicine and told him to take it three nights running and then skip one night."

WHICH DO WE WANT?

One of the underlying issues of election year 1972 is redistribution of income and wealth. The old populist cry of "Soak the rich!" has assumed a subtler tone. Now they talk of tax reform, and the goal is to turn legitimate reform into a revolutionary tool. Thus the moment has come when ordinary citizens must seek to understand certain fundamentals about where and how money is raised to keep the productive mechanism of a country running.

In an editorial, entitled "The New Populism ...", a publication of the First National City Bank has this to say on the subject, "In the United States, a large proportion of the invested capital funds is drawn from retained earnings of corporations and savings of middle - and high - income families. The well of private savings can be drawn down, even emptied, by new and higher taxes on corporations and individuals. But if that is done, the federal government will have to provide an alternative mechanism for the formation of capital. Experience in Russia and other countries where capital formation is the province of highly centralized bureaucracies has not been happy."

In communist countries, where government has abolished sources of private capital, investment in job - creating enterprises is done by the state. The production of goods and services is based upon compulsion. Capital formation is a simple process of levying taxes. In the U. S., under the capitalistic system, investment is voluntary, and the businesses and industries this voluntary investment creates provide rich sources of tax revenue for all levels of government. This is the American system that is under attack. Populist tax reformers merely wish to substitute compulsory investment by taxpayers for voluntary investment by free citizens. The question is which system do the American people want?

EQUAL SPACE

The First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution is vital in that it guarantees freedom of speech and press. That same amendment, however, does not call for malicious and unproved charges against individuals. The press must police itself and in many instances this is done. In recent years, the news media have developed adversary journalism which ranges correspondents and editors against officialdom and institutions and too often accusations are leveled by direct means and innuendo when there are no facts to support the allegations.

The laws of libel offer a measure of protection to victims of slander but the Sullivan decision of the Supreme Court of the U. S. practically laid naked public officials who are attacked by the media. Adversary journalism in recent years has been aimed primarily at officialdom. It is good for the press and radio and television news to be vigilant but they should confine their reporting to facts and fairness.

One remedy can be offered to the public by the media now. It can provide equal time and space to those who are named in stories that are of a derogatory nature or which relate events that others might see in a different light. The Florida Supreme Court has upheld a 1913 statute requiring newspapers to give equal space to persons who come under editorial attack. We feel this is a good law and that it should be adopted nationally. In a sense of fair play, all sides of a story should be presented to the public. Freedom of the press should-- and does-- imply responsibility of the press. HLH

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

WASHINGTON-- The toughest thing for a business executive when he retires is to realize that, after a long career of directing people and making major multimillion- dollar decisions, he has no one to order around and no vital business problems to resolve. While this is very frustrating for the retired man, it's even rougher on his wife.

The other day Zuckert's wife came over to see me. Zuckert had been a very successful vice president of a large corporation and has been retired for six months. Mrs. Zuckert was beginning to show the strains.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," she said. "Abbot's driving me up the wall. He's running the house just the way he used to run the business."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"All the drive and energy that went into his 35- year career is now being directed toward me. I am no longer a housewife. I am now vice president in charge of household management. By summer, he said, spinach could be in short supply, and we could make a killing in it.

"I replied that we couldn't keep spinach until the summertime and, since there were only two of us, there was just so much we could consume. He said sometimes you have to take chances when you're running a household or the competition will kill you. He ordered me to set up a research and development department so we could find a way to keep spinach fresh until summer."

"You really have your hands full," I told Mrs. Zuckert.

"You don't know what I've been going through," she said. "Every time I come home, Abbot has a new chart in the kitchen showing accounts receivable, cash outflow expenses and income. He keeps talking about increased production and slashing labor costs. Since I'm the only labor in the house, it obviously makes me very nervous."

"Who wouldn't be?" I asked.

"The worst things are his memos. Every night I find one on my pillow pointing out a household management mistake I had made that day. This includes cooking, housecleaning, marketing and getting rid of the garbage.

"Abbot insists that I haven't been running the house at full efficiency, and there is a great deal of overlapping of duties. He's instituted a systems control so we can cut costs and, as he puts it, 'get a bigger bang for the buck.' "

"Abbot always was cost-conscious," I said.

"He's called for a complete revision of our inventory accounting methods. This means we can't store too many cans of chicken soup in the closet at one time.

"He wants me to keep my shopping lists in triplicate, and to submit requisitions to the executive committee before I buy any household appliances over $25. When he first retired, I humored him about it. I realized he was in a decompression tank, and it would take time before he realized he was no longer in business.

"But instead of getting better, it's getting worse. Last night he asked me if I intended to take a position on spinach. I said I hadn't given it any thought, and he pointed out that a supermarket was having a sale on spinach and it might be a good time to buy up as much as we could. Last week for my birthday he bought me a large sign with one word on it, THINK."

"I have an idea," I told Mrs. Zuckert. "Why don't you threaten to resign?"

"I have," she replied tearfully, "and he said if I did I would lose m[illegible]usion plan."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

How Dean Fingered Nixon

WASHINGTON-- The dramatic story can now be told how President Nixon came under investigation by the original Watergate prosecutors. They laid the groundwork a year ago for the present impeachment proceedings.

The sequence began in mid- April, 1973, when ex- White House counsel John Dean gave prosecutors Earl Silbert, Seymour Glanzer and Donald Campbell fragments of the Watergate story. They sent him back to get documents and put together a coherent account.

Sources close to the investigation, however, say Dean carefully kept the President out of his confessions until the last week of April. Then Dean, as part of his plea bargaining for a deal for himself, played his big ace.

His attorney, Charles Shaffer, notified the prosecutors on April 23 that Dean "could deliver the President," our sources report. They were given an outline of the testimony that Dean later delivered, implicating President Nixon in the Watergate cover-up.

Up to that moment, the prosecutors had believed the President was not involved. They had provided Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen, therefore, with the complete details of their investigation for relay to the President.

Because of the possibility that the President had been a party to the crimes they were investigating, the prosecutors decided they had to shut off the flow of information to the White House.

They had a showdown with Petersen over this on the night of April 25. They contended that the President was now a suspect and could no longer be told what was going on inside the grand jury.

The shocked Petersen insisted they had no business investigating the President. In any event, he said, he could never withhold information from the President of the United States.

The following day, Petersen impressed his views on U. S. Attorney Harold Titus, who stood between him and the prosecutors on the ladder of authority.

"We have to draw the line," Petersen told Titus. "We have no mandate to investigate the President."

The next link in our story is provided by the White House tapes. President Nixon got wind that Dean was implicating him in the Watergate crimes and summoned Petersen to the Oval Office the evening of April 27.

"We have gotten a report," said the President, "that, ah. that really we've got to head them off at the pass. Because it's so damned, so damn dangerous to the Presidency...Information indicating that Dean has made statements to the prosecuting team implicating the President...Now, Henry, this I've got to know."

Petersen agreed to try to find out what Dean was telling the prosecutors. But Petersen warned apologetically that he was having trouble with the prosecutors.

"We had a kind of crisis of confidence night before last..." he said, "whether or not they were at ease with my reporting to you..."

But the President was adamant. "If Dean is implicating the Presidency," snapped Nixon, "we are going to damned well find out about it."

He insisted that Petersen phone the prosecutors from the White House and find out what Dean was telling them. Petersen obediently put through the call and learned that Shaffer had approached the prosecutors with an offer of evidence against the President.

Petersen immediately reported this back to the President. Quoting the prosecutors, Petersen said Shaffer told them: "We will bring the President in-- not this case but in other things."

Our sources say the prosecutors agreed with Petersen that they had no authority over the President. They even drafted a memo giving their opinion that, legally, the President couldn't be indicted but could only be impeached.

They thought it was their duty, however, to get all the facts about Watergate. So they went ahead with their efforts to get Dean's evidence against the President. They were in the process of preparing the evidence to lay before the grand jury when the Watergate investigation was taken away from them and turned over to a Special Prosecutor.

But the Special Prosecutor picked up where they left off. The record was made before the grand jury and turned over to the House for an impeachment inquiry, as they had recommended.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Nixon's former right bower, H. R. Haldeman, kept cash stashed around the White House and in the apartments of aides. One former aide, Fred LaRue, led his lawyers to some cash that figured in the Watergate case. It was stuffed in a brown manila envelope in an open White House file drawer. They lawyers took the envelope to a nearby bank and dumped out $128,000 in loose cash...

During the 1972 campaign, Nixon aides squandered money on everything from champagne breakfasts to break- ins. But there was one exception, White House liaison man Fred Malek, who tried vainly to keep down expenses. In a secret memo complaining about a $3,500 dinner for businessmen at Washington's soignee Madison Hotel, Malek told campaign aides: "I believe it is important to have a first class event for people of (this) caliber." But really, he said acidly, "$42 per head for cocktails and dinner does seem a bit steep"...

We recently told how two U. S. mining companies in South Africa abused their black employes, blaming the government for forcing racist policies upon them. In contrast, Mobil Oil has boldly given its black employes in South Africa pensions, medical and home ownership plans, higher salaries and major job upgradings. The measures were taken in consultation with U. S. religious leaders.

Bloody Showdown:

National Catholic, Jewish, Protestant Clergy Rally To Chavez In Final Clash With Teamsters

WASHINGTON-- It's "May time, that's rebel time," an old radical used to say as massed May Day banners, held aloft, went by on the country's cities' streets. But today May time is Cesar Chavez's time, harvest time in the fields ranging from the California-Mexican border right up the state which any day now he will hit with a "series of representation strikes." According to his spiritual mentor and counsellor, Msgr. Heorge Higgins, these stoppages will run "until the end of the summer" in the table grapes and lettuce ranches.

The issue is not Chavez's strength. He has the strength of many in George Meany's AFL-CIO, Leonard Woodcock's auto workers and Arnold Miller's mine workers. Nor will Chavez's United Farm Workers lack funds.

Chavez's little union had net assets of $1,449,429 at the end of 1972. And during the following year or so other labor leaders poured in some $3 million and considerable manpower in the conflict with the massive Teamsters brotherhood.

Charismatic as is La Causa (The Cause) of the little farm workers leader, who has deified Mahatma Gandhi, Bob Kennedy and Martin Luther King, Jr., the war now actually is a sprawling jurisdictional conflict. Sooner or later it will hit virtually every large supermarket and food chain in virtually every major city.

What makes this jurisdictional strike different from all others is the self-involvement of the nation's clergy. Practically all the clergy. Not just the National Conference of Catholic Bishops but the United Church of Christ, the Presbytery of New York City, and the Synagogue Council of America, just to name a few of the clerical organizations which have rallied to Chavez.

True, some clergy swung behind the costly Amalgamated Clothing Workers (AFL- CIO) boycott of Farah slacks. But the union spent its own $2 million during its successful traditional strike and boycott. Its leaders, President Murray Finley and Secretary- Treasurer Jack Sheinkman, directed their own strategy. They swung the national and international labor movement behind them.

But in the migrant farm workers' war, which will see much blood shed, many heads cracked and perhaps bombings too, the clergy has been in the vanguard of Chavez's small union. Now, of course, Meany is mobilizing the AFL- CIO's 900 city and state central bodies. The war is on. He has dispatched documents giving advice on almost every minute detail to force off the nation's retail shelves any table grapes or lettuce picked by the Teamsters who now have 99 per cent of the California contracts.

Meany is getting powerful support. Just the other day New York's new Democratic Mayor Abe Beame directed the city's Department of Purchase not to buy or even accept bids for lettuce (for the city's hospitals and institutions) from anyone who deals with the Teamsters in the field. This takes daring and loyalty to the AFL- CIO in a city in which there are some 175,000 tightly organized Teamsters.

In one fashion or another this is true of other heavily unionized communities-- Detroit, for example. No simple conflict this: The Teamsters won't budge. Their argument, strangely enough, was best articulated recently by Jimmy Hoffa. He said:

"You have to understand the economics of canneries, drivers and field workers, concerning the desire of the Teamsters Union to protect the members they have in the canning industry...in the warehousing and transportation industry, with an irresponsible union that reserves the right to call strikes that could eventually, in a matter of days, lay off hundreds of thousands of people we have in the Teamsters Union, as against the very minimal number of people who work in the fields...

"So it is common sense that the Teamsters Unions have tied into the canneries, the warehouses and drivers, the field workers that produce the merchandise that keep the other part of the industry operating."

However, without the power to strike at critical harvest time-- the growers' make- or- break season-- Chavez's spiritual, physical and fiscal support means little. That's why Chavez told one important Senate official he'll never give it up. He just doesn't trust any government agency. Certainly not the National Labor Relations Board. He just doesn't want any law which would prevent his striking the lush ripe fields at harvest time-- no compulsory arbitration. No cooling- off period as in Taft-Hartley.

The Teamsters charge, according to the Senate official, that they won't agree to elections in the field without government supervision because they don't trust Chavez. They charge he would bring in "ringers," Chicanos who are not field workers, for the polling.

So it's a stand- off. The Teamsters won't back down. Neither will Meany. Nor Chavez. The balance of power therefore appears to be not the Congress but the clergy. They are, in Biblical terms, girding for the Armageddon. Their pulpits and most of their media are targeting in on Frank Fitzsimmons's Teamsters. A Biblical Solomon is needed before armies literally clash in the vineyards. And on some hot pavements, too. May Day, May Day. May Day.

'Parolees can be denied common law marriage'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Prison parolees can be prohibited from having common-law marriages, an attorney general's opinion said Friday.

The opinion said the state Board of Probation and Parole may set rules regarding parolees from Missouri prisons and parolees sent to Missouri under the interstate compact for supervision of parolees and probationers.

The board's rules forbid common-law marriages, which were made illegal by a 1921 state law.

Man shot following argument

KENNETT-- Carl Faries, in his early 30s, of Rector, Ark. is in Campbell Clinic in Memphis, Tenn. with gunshot wounds, following an argument Friday night with Fredie Joe Martin, 24, of Kennett at the Martin home.

A spokesman for Kennett police said today Martin told police the argument between the two men began at a Kennett tavern. Faries later went to the Martin home where the argument resumed.

Martin said he grabbed a gun off a wall and was going to scare Faries when Faries grabbed the barrel and the gun discharged.

No charges have been filed.

Ann Landers

Teacher tells ugly duckling she really isn't ugly at all

Dear Ann Landers: I saw myself in your column a few days ago, the child with the two pretty sisters and a mother who favored the "beauties."

When I was a small child I remember mama taking us out for walks and always pulling my hood down over my face or wrapping a scarf around my head so only my eyes would show. My sisters looked like dad's side of the family, all of them blonde, blue- eyed and beautiful. Once a neighbor mentioned this to mama and asked, "Who does THAT one resemble?" Her answer cut me like a knife. She said, "Someone must have dropped her on our doorstep."

I grew up thinking I was the ugliest, most worthless thing in the world. It affected everything I did. I actually hated to look in the mirror.

A wonderful person changed my life. She was my fifth- grade teacher. That wise lady sensed my anguish and kept me after school one day. She told me I was really quite a nice- looking girl, that my face was "interesting" and when I grew older I would probably be considered very attractive. She asked me to stay after school frequently to "help her." We had many talks and I can truthfully say that wise and generous lady gave me a truly new outlook on life.

I hope all teachers everywhere will read this letter carefully. It will give them some insight into the importance of kindness and emotional support to the less attractive student. God bless Miss B., wherever she is.-- Grown Up And Grateful

Dear Grateful: Thank you for a beautiful letter. Has it ever occurred to you to make an effort to locate Miss B. and tell her what she did for you? I hope the woman is still living. It's so much nicer when you can give flowers to a person who can smell them.

Dear Ann Landers: A year ago my husband asked me to join a club called "W. S. Unlimited." He heard about it at work and knew three members. He said it would help add zest to our marriage and he was very enthusiastic about it.

After the first meeting I got the idea. It was a Wife-Swapping group. I hated the idea from the beginning but decided to go along with it because it was so important to him. The people were creepy. Many of the women told me it made their lives exciting and they really enjoyed it a lot.

Well, I'll tell you what it did for me. It made me despise myself and my husband for bringing this ugly, rotten thing into our lives. When I think of what I have done I get sick to my stomach. I must have been out of my mind to have agreed to this insane set- up.

I am filing for divorce and I hope to God I never again see another member of W. S. Unltd., man or woman, as long as I live.-- Shamefaced In Manhattan

Dear S. F.: About five years ago when I first started to receive letters about such clubs I found it hard to believe they actually existed. Then several couples wrote joint letters telling me what a shot in the arm it had given their marriages. I came to the conclusion that they were bonkers and I told them so.

Thanks for your testimonial, dear. Now that you have scraped the scum off yourself I wish you luck in making a new life.

Confidential to Can't Live Without Him: Yes you can. And it will be a better life, I assure you. Bite the bullet, baby, and don't look back. Your future is ahead of you.

A no- nonsense approach on how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage-- What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Book Review

THE OBSESSION OF EMMET BOOTH
by Martha Albrand
(Avon 18010/$.95
190 pp.)

Martha Albrand, Avon's "Mistress of Romantic Intrigue," departs both from her usual setting in Europe and her usual thematic concerns in the OBSESSION OF EMMET BOOTH, now an Avon paperback. Reviewers have noted that in the novel, which is based in the United States, "Martha Albrand has deserted her usual field, that of the active escape and chase, fora subtler form of pursuit novel."

Emmet Booth, an under-educated, unattractive, self-made millionaire, meets Miranda Page and sees in her the embodiment of the gentility which has eluded him. He pursues her through New York, England, and France, and when he cannot successfully buy her love, he resorts to cruel trickery. Martha Albrand creates a mixture of psychopathic infatuation and psychological suspense which prompted one reviewer to write, "For all the absence of bludgeons and bloodshed, it is as chilling a horror story as this reader has ever read."

Women alcoholics have pregnancy risks

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who are chronic alcoholics during pregnancy risk bearing physically and mentally deficient offspring and sometimes even early death for these children, a team of Seattle pediatric researchers reports.

They say the risk is sufficiently high that physicians should seriously consider recommending "early pregnancy termination"—abortion—for chronically alcoholic women.

Dr. Kenneth L. Jones and several colleagues of the University of Washington School of Medicine made the statements in a report Thursday to a joint meeting of the American Pediatric Society and the Society for Pediatric Research.

They described results of their latest research on what they call the "fetal alcohol syndrome."

In previously published preliminary reports, the scientists have defined the syndrome as a pattern of altered growth and development observed among children of chronically alcoholic mothers and believed to have its origin within the womb itself.

Manifestations of the condition include cranial-facial, limb and cardiovascular defects.

In their new report, the Seattle researchers said they have now evaluated the records of 23 offspring of chronically alcoholic mothers and data on a comparable number of offspring of nonalcoholic mothers.

Among the offspring of the alcoholic women, 17 per cent died shortly after birth; 32 percent of the survivors were considered to have the "fetal alcohol syndrome" and 44 per cent had intelligence quotients (IQs) of 79 or below at 7 years of age.

In contrast, among offspring of the nonalcoholic mothers, only 2 per cent died soon after birth; none of the survivors showed "fetal alcohol" symptoms and only 9 per cent had IQs 79 or below at age 7.

Burlison says Watergate will damage GOP ticket

FREDERICKTOWN — "Watergate will damage the entire Republican ticket in 1974, but will not be as effective a campaign issue for the Democrats as will be the President's mismanagement of the economy and energy crisis," Rep. Bill D. Burlison stated in an address at the 10th District Missouri Federation of Women's Democratic Clubs meeting at noon, Saturday in the Long Horn Restaurant on Highway 67.

The Cape Girardeau Democrat outlined congressional and presidential action respecting wage and price controls and emphasized how history always repeats itself with highest interest rates under Republican presidential leadership.

Burlison said the President had prevented passage of the emergency energy bill which was debated the last three days before adjournment, prior to Christmas. He said the House- passed bill provided for a tax on windfall profits of the large oil corporations, as well as providing for the companies to disclose the amount of their oil reserves.

The oil- producing states and large oil corporations were very much opposed to these provisions and with the aid of the President succeeded in preventing passage of the bill with these provisions, he remarked.

Burlison said Democrats have continued to support those provisions as debate on the bill has been renewed in the second session of the 93rd Congress. Congressional action has again been taken on the bill and it is now on the President's desk for a second veto, or his signature.

"Congress has finally made progress in limiting Presidential encroachment on legislative functions," the congressman said in mentioning passage of the war powers resolution over the President's veto which precludes prolonged involvement of U. S. forces in foreign wars without affirmative approval of the Congress.

3 injured in area traffic

A Cape Girardeau woman was seriously injured and two other area residents received minor injuries in two area traffic accidents over the weekend, according to the highway patrol.

Jean Ann Brunke, 21, received a serious cut at 5:30 p.m. Sunday .4 mile north of Wappapello Dam on Route D when her motorcycle ran off the road at a high rate of speed and struck a highway sign.

A passenger, Francis Anthony Merkler, 19, of Cape Girardeau suffered minor injuries. Both were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Charles Hinkebein, 21, of Chaffee was injured at 11:30 p.m. Saturday two miles south of Chaffee on Highway 77 when he fell asleep at the wheel of his pickup truck which ran off the road and struck a culvert.

He was taken to Chaffee General Hospital.

FHA Family of Year named

COLUMBIA — The Hal Walls family of Bragg City has been named Missouri's Farmers Home Administration Farm Family of the Year, according to an announcement by John O. Foster, FHA state director.

The Walls family is representative of approximately 8,000 FHA farm borrowers in Missouri. They have demonstrated the progress that can be made with full utilization of available land, labor and capital.

First State Bank of Caruthersville will sponsor a luncheon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walls on June 7. Congressman Bill D. Burlison, a former Pemiscot Countian, will speak at the cememony. A special plaque will be presented to the Walls family by Sperry-New Holland Co., the national sponsor. Agricultural leaders, state and local officials, farmers and rural residents will attend.

The Bragg City family is the fourth that has been honored in the Farmers Home Administration's state "Farm Family of the Year" program. The award was established in 1970 as a means of honoring families who have demonstrated outstanding progress as farmers and rural citizens. Farming methods, financial progress, family living, property improvement, community leadership and overcoming adversities are some of the criteria used in making the selection.

As recipient of Missouri's Farm Family Award, the Wallses will not compete for national farm family honors.

Gibson beats Houston, 3-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Veteran pitcher Bob Gibson doesn't throw as hard as in the past, but it was not necessary against the Houston Astros Sunday.

Gibson, 38, limited the Astros to five hits in eight inning as the St. Louis Cardinals stopped Houston, 3-1.

It snapped a five- game Houston winning streak and it boosted Gibson's lifetime record against hte Astros to 29-13. That's the best record any pitcher in the National League has against Houston.

Reggie Smith contributed a two- run homer for the Cardinals — his sixth of the season.

Gibson didn't pitch the ninth. His bad knee which he had surgery on during the off- season, began acting up and Mike Garman finished up without allowing a base runner.

St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst said Gibson's knee started bothering him in the seventh when he had some control problems.

"He said it was all right in the eighth but you could see he wasn't driving off the mound like he can."

However, Astros Manager Preston Gomez was impressed with Gibson.

"He doesn't throw as hard anymore but he 's still a helluva pitcher," Gomez said. "He got tired, that's all. You could see he was running out of gas."

Gomez also was impressed with Larry Dierker, his starting pitcher, who gave up seven hits and three Cardinal runs.

"Dierker pitched good enough to win, too," Gomez said. "It's just we're not getting him any runs."

Gibson seemed to think the pitcher's mound was too flat and this caused him to have congrol problems at times.

"My slider was breaking in front of the plate," he said.

St. Louis scored one run in the second on Bake McBride's double and Mike Tyson's single.

Smith's home run in the sixth followed a single by Luis Alvarado.

Houston put up a big threat against Gibson in the seventh but managed only one run.

After Gibson walked both Doug Rader and Tommy Helms, Bob Gallagher singled to center to score Rader and send Helms to third.

Pinch- hitter Milt May then flied deep to right. It backed Smith to the wall and ended up in a double play as Smith's throw caught Gallagher trying to get back to first. Helms attempted to score on the play but the umpire ruled the out at first occurred before he reached home plate.

Homers highlight softball circuit

Home runs highlighted opening night action in the Southeast Missouri softball league over the weekend as New Hamburg edged Kelso 6-1, Vanduser defeated Security National Bank 7-3, New Hamburg Falstaff turned back Illmo- Scott City 8-5 and Oran blanked Cape Girardeau 1-0.

Danny Burger alammed a two run round tripper and Ray Glasstetter and Jerome Backfisch hit solo blasts to back the four hit pitching performance of Rick Duncan as New Hamburg opened its season with a big victory. Ken Ressel was the losing hurler, despite connecting for a home run. New Hamburg hosts Oran Wednesday night.

Vanduser used the six hit pitching of Jimmy Johnson to roll up it s opening season victory.

Wayne Limbaugh led an eight hit Vanduser offensive attack with three safeties, including a run scoring triple in the first inning.

Security National Bank jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but failed to contain the hard hitting Vanduser nine, who evened the score in the fourth when Chris Dover slammed a home run.

Terry Brown broke the deadlock with a two run single in the fifth for a 4-2 lead. Larry Jones honored for Sikeston in the bottom of the inning to make the score 4-3, but a three run sixth inning put the game away for Vanduser, who goes to Benton Wednesday night.

Turkey hunt

Weather slowed the second half of Missouri's wild turkey season which saw more than 4,000 birds taken through the first week. Poor hatches have hampered turkey populations the last two springs and Department of Conservation biologists are hoping for a good spring this year so that turkeys could make a rapid recovery.

GROVE CITY, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-five celebrities from the media, government and sports will join 75 amateurs Saturday for the first annual Grove City Charity Open Golf Tournament.

The celebrities will be headed by for pro basketball stars Larry Jones of the Philadelphia 76ers, John Barnhill, assistant coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, Rudy Tomjanovich of the Houston Rockets and Steve Jones of the Denver Rockets, officials said.

Turkey season successful

JEFFERSON CITY- Weather put a dent in the second half of Missouri's wild turkey season over much of the state, as rains hampered hunters.

But through the first weekend of the April 22-May 4 season, hunting success was running about even with that of 1973, a record season.

Hunters had taken fewer birds in the east central region, one of the two heaviest bag areas in the state, but had taken more in the Ozark region, the other prime gobbler hunting spot.

Leading county through the first week was Ste. Genevieve with 212 birds. Other high counties included Dent with 182, Texas with 181, Wayne with 171 and Washington with 170.

Only one male turkey or one bearded bird is legal- most bearded birds are gobblers, though hens occasionally do have beards. North- central Missouri reported five bearded hens taken, as well as one bearded albino hen from Lincoln County.

Almost all areas are reporting a heavy adult to young ratio, bearing out indications that there was a poor wild turkey hatch in 1973 because of wet weather.

It was a season of exceptional turkey stories, if not exceptional hunting. The largest turkey reported was a whopping 28 pound, 10 ounce bird, taken by Harry Gegg Jr., Ste. Genevieve, only 10 minutes after the May 22 opener on a farm he and his father own. Don Prenger, Jefferson City, took a 27 pounder in Osage County near Folk.

The state record bird for weight is 33 pounds, 13 ounces, taken two seasons ago by Bob Stephens of Salem.

Ernest Walker, Bloomsdale, took an all-white wild turkey, which was verified as a wild bird by Department of Conservation wildlife biologist Leroy Korschgen, west of Bloomsdale.

The bird was not an albino-- it had a dark beard and normal eyes, not pink eyes. It weighed 10 pounds, 14 ounces. There have been several white wild turkeys reported in the area and Walker had heard the stories.

One of the more remarkable hunters is 19 year old William Carron of Bloomsdale. He has taken five birds in six years, including one this season with a bow and arrow. There have been only a handful of bow kills since modern seasons opened in 1960.

Although turkeys normally have a home range of a mile or two, JuDon Frambrough, Purdy, bagged a 23 pound, 12 ounce gobbler in Barry County which may have set a record for travel.

It was released Feb. 23, 1970, some 10 miles away in Stone County. It weighed 18 pounds at release.

Missouri has few out- of-state turkey hunters, but this season saw some who were really out- of- state-- even out- of- country.

Hans Tolksdorf, a school superintendent from Zanten, Germany, killed a 22 pound bird in St. Charles County, while in Missouri visiting his twin brother, Heinz, a Washington, Mo., veterinarian.

The brothers planned Hans' first trip to the United States so they could turkey hunt together. Hans said, after the successful hunt, that only a millionaire would have such a hunting opportunity in Germany.

Kenneth Henry, a retired businessman and native of Jamaica, took a 22 pound bird in Texas County. He had traveled here from his home. He has turkey hunted in southern states, but says Missouri birds are much larger.

And Jose Silva, Guadalajara, Mexico, is convinced he saw a cougar (mountain lion) while turkey hunting south of Roaring River State Park.

Silva has seen the big cats on hunts before and has hunted all over the world. There is plenty of supportive evidence-- Barry County conservation agent Charles Marrs says he has seen mountain lion tracks and said a dead deer put in the woods last winter had cat tracks all around it and eventually was dragged off.

Missouri has one known mountain lion, in the Current River country a long way from Barry County.

Jinx colt...

LOUISVILLE (AP) — If Cannonade, the new Kentucky Derby champ, were the worrying kind, he might waste away to a bag of bones looking over his shoulder and wondering when he might collide with a freight train or meet some other disaster.

He is now running in the shadow of the Hudson County jinx.

When longshot Hudson County ran second to the bay grandson of Bold Ruler in Saturday's 100th Derby, believers in the occult began conjuring up all sorts of dire portents.

Hudson County is bad news to horses who have the gall to kick dirt in his eyes.

"I don't like to talk about it, it's gruesome," said Skip Shapoff, trainer of the runner-up who was one of 10 in the field who by himself probably would have been a 100-1 shot.

"We were beaten by a horse named Near Gay in our maiden race Jan. 30 last year at Hialeah. Near Gay later was burned to death in a fire."

The youthful Shapoff paused in his recitation and looked over his shoulder furtively at the little bay colt in stall 3, barn 43 at Churchill Downs.

"Really, we shouldn't talk about it," he protested.

There was a prod from the small knot of hardy barn troopers who made the backstretch rounds on the day after.

"Then in April of 1972 there was the Layafette at Keeneland. We lose by half a length to Mr. AZ. Not long after that, Mr. AZ turns up with a twisted intestine and dies in Florida."

Shapoff was sure that was enough to satisfy any ghoul, but it wasn't.

"Well, then this year came the Wood," the trainer related. "Of course, Rube The Great won it but a horse named Friendly B finished ahead of us."

Goodness, and what in the world happened to Friendly B?

"Aw, you know," protested Shapoff. "He dropped dead just the other day at Bowie."

Shepoff glanced up toward barn 42 where trainer Woody Stephens was loading Cannonade and stablemate Judger into huge vans.

"I hope none of these air waves are floating toward Cannonade," he said.

Shapoff, personally distressed over what has befallen some of Hudson County's rivals, doesn't cotton to witches and evil spirits.

A realistic man, he knows that horse races are won on the track with speed, endurance and heart, and they're the tools of his candidate for the Preakness and Belmont lying ahead.

"This is a good little horse," he said proudly. "Alert, fiesty, aggressive. He'll nip at you but he hasn't got an ounce of meanness in him. If Cannonade had had just one little bit of trouble, I'd have the Derby champion today."

NBA playoffs even at 2 games

BOSTON (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks, noted for their mighty offense, talked of defense and the defensive-minded Boston Celtics spoke of offense as the two teams headed for Milwaukee and the fifth game of their showdown for the National Basketball Association championship.

"Our defense was a lot better, but I expected it to be as we went along," Milwaukee Coach Larry Costello said Sunday after the Bucks evened the best-of-seven series 2-2 with a 97-89 victory.

"We broke down offensively," Boston captain John Havlicek said. "We didn't have real good rhythm. Maybe we were cutting the wrong way. They played real good defense, but we were standing around and being hesitant."

Costello, looking ahead to Tuesday night's game, turned to an old cliche in saying: "Now it's a three-game series." The victory regained the home court advantage for the Bucks, but neither Havlicek nor Milwaukee veteran Oscar Robertson placed much emphasis on that.

Costello pulled a surprise in the fourth game in a move designed to break through Boston's full-court press. He started 6-foot-7 Mickey Davis, normally a forward, in the backcourt with Robertson.

"The change helped us a lot," Costello said. "We had a taller team and we also had more player power. We figured that at the very least would create problems for them. Then, of course, we had Jon McGlocklin back. Now we're able to rest people. McGlocklin is still hurting, but he's able to play."

Davis played 28 minutes and contributed 15 points, eight in the first period. McGlocklin, playing with his injured leg heavily taped, saw 22 minutes of action, scoring 10 points.

As usual, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Bucks with 34 points. Bob Dandridge hit for 21 and Robertson 10. Havlicek and Dave Cowens topped Boston with 33 and 24, respectively.

The Bucks jumped to a 14-6 lead, but the Celtics came back and the advantage seesawed. Then, with defensive ace Don Chaney on the bench with three fouls, the Bucks out-scored Boston 15-2 in a second quarter burst for a 49-39 halftime lead.

The Celtics, who hit on only 36 of 88 floor shots compared to Milwaukee's 38 of 76, closed to within two points five times in the third period before Abdul-Jabbar cashed a three-point play just before the buzzer.

The Bucks maintained their poise the rest of the way and the Celtics were unable to get closer than three points in the final period.

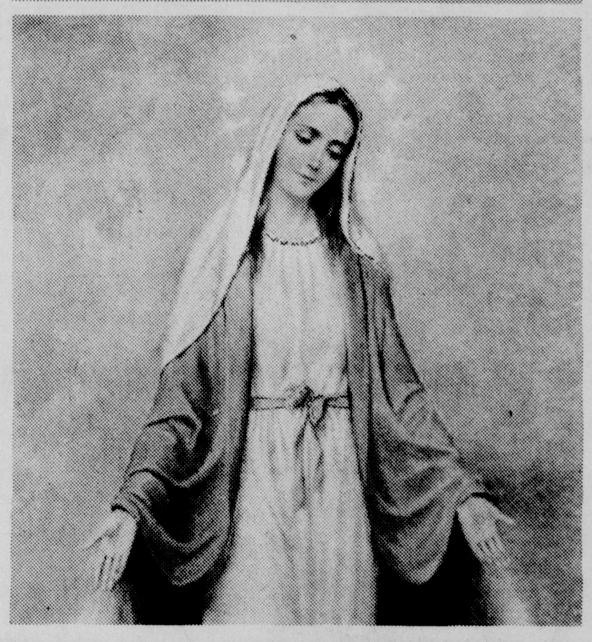
Behold Your Mother



As Jesus hung dying on the Cross, John, His beloved disciple and Mary, His mother stood beneath Him. Turning to His mother, Jesus said "Woman, behold thy son." Then He said to the disciple, "Behold thy mother."

In giving His mother to John, Jesus was giving her to all His followers and ever since that time, Mary has been acclaimed by Christians as not merely being the mother of Christ but being indeed the mother of all mankind. Mary is our mother because she is the mother of Christ and through Christ we are given new life.

Bruce Lee death remains a mystery

HONG KONG (AP) — A cult venerates Kung Fu film star Bruce Lee in death.

Fan letters pour in to the studio where he worked. Release of his films in many countries sets off new waves of reaction. Foreigners arrive on pilgrimages seeking an autographed photo of the American-born Lee.

Now, nine months after he died at 33, many still consider his death a mystery.

Found unconscious by a friend, he died while being taken to a hospital. A coroner's inquest ruled he was a victim of "hypersensitivity to certain drugs." But circumstances surrounding the death were riddled with questions.

Mention Lee's name in this city where he died and you are likely to be answered in hushed whispers. Everyone, it seems, has a theory — usually grounded in superstition — about the "true" cause of the star's death.

"In Hong Kong," says one resident, "you have to worry about superstitions all the time. If a house is built with the door facing in an unlucky direction, people won't move in."

A widely circulated story says Lee died because of "bad fung chi" — bad luck — brought on when he moved to a house built on the wrong side of one of Hong Kong's nine mountain, referred to as the "Nine Dragons."

Those who tell the story say Lee was warned his house was "on the wrong side of the Dragon." He took a precaution of installing a giant mirror on the roof to ward off evil spirits. If a spirit came down toward the house it would see itself and be scared away.

Last summer, the story goes, a typhoon hit Hong Kong ripping the mirror off the roof and smashing it. Shortly thereafter, Lee died.

Others have theorized that Lee died from the fight scenes for Kung Fu pictures, or that he suffered from a rare disease. There is recurring speculation — apparently unfounded — of foul play.

Lee came here as an unknown actor and rose to superstardom in such films as "The Fists of Fury" and "Enter The Dragon." Born in San Francisco and a onetime philosophy student at the University of Washington at Seattle, Lee came to Hong Kong in 1970 after producer Raymond Chou picked him for "Fists of Fury."

It was his first movie role. He had appeared in "The Green Hornet," "Batman" and "Longstreet" television series and operated a kung fu school in Los Angeles.

Executives at Golden Harvest Studios here still grieve the loss of their biggest star. At the time of his death, Lee commanded $1 million a picture in Hong Kong, where most actors make about $1,000 a film.

The zaniest baseball holdout probably was George "Rube" Ellis, crack St. Louis outfielder, back in 1908. Ellis refused to sign his contract until he got what he was holding out for -- $2.50 -- to buy a new fielder's glove!

Father charged in castration of 13-year-old son

HOUSTON (AP) — A petroleum engineer has been charged with castrating his 13-year-old son by exposing him to radioactive material.

A five-count indictment returned by a Harris County grand jury Thursday charged Kerry Andrus Crocker, 43, with castration and assault to murder, maim and disfigure his son, Kirk.

Crocker, who denied the charges, was jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond.

The indictment was served on Crocker at the end of a child support hearing Thursday at which Crocker's former wife is asking for increased payments to meet the boy's doctor bills.

Kirk, who got out of a wheelchair and used a crutch to make his way to the witness stand, testified for 90 minutes at a hearing in Juvenile Judge Robert Lowry's courtroom.

The boy testified that beginning in mid-1972 his father had placed some strange, metal, cylindrical-shaped pellets near his body while he slept at Crocker's townhouse during visitation periods.

He said the pellets were found in such places as his pillow, under the sofa where he slept and in headphones connected to a television set. He said he always tried to move away from the pellets when he found them.

Barbara Smith, 42, the boy's mother, had testified earlier in the hearing that large sores appeared on the boy's ankle, right thumb and inner thighs. The sores would break open and appear to eat away at the skin and muscle tissue.

John Bible, an attorney, said the boy's testicles had deteriorated. He also said the boy needed a crutch or a wheelchair to get around and can walk by himself only 10 or 15 minutes at a time.

Crocker denied at the hearing that he deliberately exposed his son to the material, identified as cesium.

He said the material was used to log oil wells and that he had a permit issued by the State Health Department to have possession of the substance.

DR LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Safe, sane way to lose weight

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — This is my gift to all your readers who are trying to lose weight. Some time ago a woman wrote you how she safely lost 20 pounds in three months. I had tried just about everything, and this woman's advice sounded sensible, so I tried it. Like she said, I lost 20 pounds in three months, from 140 to 120 pounds. I did not count calories or stick to high proteins, as many protein foods contain some fat, too. I did not take any kind of pill. I simply ate a well-balanced meal three times a day, but reduced the amount.

I ate one serving instead of two or three, nothing between meals. At bedtime I always liked ice cream in summer and hot chocolate in winter. Instead of a dish filled to overflowing and heaped up, I cut down to two scoops. I reasoned with myself that I was eating everything I wanted or needed, only cutting the amount. I didn't run to the scales every day as this is a slow, sure method. I simply took the woman's word, followed her advice and relaxed.

Before I could weigh myself (I have no scales of my own), friends were remarking how I must be losing weight, or "Did you know you are losing weight?" I know this will hurt some advertisers' business, but like I said, it's my gift to your readers, and if they accept it and appreciate the weight lost I hope they will write you.

DEAR READER — You are another example of the wisdom of a good diet program that involves a complete and consistent correction of faulty eating habits. Congratulations.

The problem most people have with a sensible diet is that they have no patience. They want to lose weight overnight, even though it took them sometimes years to add all that fat to their bodies. As a result, they go on a fad diet, with or without success. When they have lost the weight, if they can stand the diet that long, they commonly return to their old eating habits, the very ones that caused them to get overweight to begin with. So, what happens? A large percentage of people who do lose weight gain it back.

You have to learn to eat a proper diet as a way of life to avoid obesity. In many instances this can be solved by simply cutting back on the amount of all the different foods you eat, rather than eliminating particular foods. It is not necessary to eliminate carbohydrates to lose weight, or for that matter to eliminate any food type. What you need to eliminate is calories. For more information on losing weight write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for the booklet on "losing weight." Enclose 50 cents to cover costs.

I'm glad you lost the 20 pounds, but it would have been just dandy if it had come off even slower. Anyone who needs to lose 20 pounds could easily do it as a year's program, averaging less than two pounds a month.

The only precaution I would make is don't cut back on your calories to the point that you feel too tired. Almost everyone needs a minimum of 1,200 calories a day. Less will usually cause vitamin or mineral dificiencies, unless expert diet planning is done by someone familiar with the vitamin and mineral contents of the various foods. An overly restricted calorie intake for a long period of time can harm anyone's health. For this reason I recommend sensible calorie control by simply not overeating and adding to your living pattern enough sensible exercise to help the process.

Dr. Lamb welcomes questions from his readers, but because of the volume of mail he cannot answer personally.

UMC medical students to study health issues

COLUMBIA — Missourians can expect a physician's help when they become sick or disabled but may get little help in preventing disease or in long term rehabilitation following an illness. Members of the medical school's department of community health and medical practice and the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the University of Missour- Columbia believe physicians should become more involved in the prevention of illness and in the rehabilitation process.

The departments began in January to offer clerkships for UMC medical students (from three to six students at a time) to study these issues.

Dr. Thomas J. Prendergast of community health and medical practice, who set up the clerkship plan, says it will "expose students to a range of community health problems, the identification, and possible solution, of a particular problem that suits them."

From this, he says, he hopes that the future physician will develop an awareness of the cultural, social and evnironmental factors that may predispose people to disease or interfere with their recovery.

The medical students may select a problem from a list of those known to the faculty, or they may design their own project for the eight- week clerkship experience.

Among faculty- suggested problems are:

1. Working with the hospital's ward infection surveillance officers, identifying and responding to hospital patients with infections. (Where did the infection originate? How is it being treated? Is it being treated in the best possible way?)

2. Performing follow- up on patients screened by the Missouri Heart Association and found to have high blood pressure. (One goal of this would be to reduce the number of hypertensives identified by screening but who are not currently undereffective treatment. What is effective treatment? Why don't people seek treatment after being told something is wrong? What can be done about it?)

3. Serving as patient advocates. (Students might accompany at least one patient through the hospital admissions process and spend at least a day doing much what the patient toes. They would be awakened when the patient is awakened, eat what the patient eats, be restricted to the room when the patient is restricted and accompany the patient to any X-ray or therapy treatmens prescribed -- all in order to develop an idea of the patient's point of view, to try to find out what concerns the patient and to discover what perceptions the patient has of his disease or disability.)

4. Evaluating problems of access to care. (Is the right type of health care available to all those who need it, when they need it?)

Paul Behrman, a third- year medical student has contacted former medical center stroke patients to see what problems they have encountered after leaving the hospital and returning to their homes. He says he is looking at each patient's economic situation, the family's feelings and reactions and the interest shown by the patient's physician.

Behrman will evaluate the former patients' level of functioning and the kind of ongoing program in which they are involved.

Dr. Charles R. Peterson, chairman of physical medicine and rehabilitation, says rehabilitation for stroke patients (people who have experienced paralysis of the body or of some organ of the body) includes speech, physical and occupational therapy.

He says "the goal of rehabilitation is to make people as independent as possible."

"We do that in the hospital, but when the patient returns home he is often done for, rather than doing for himself," he added.

Now, physical medicine and rehabilitation offers counseling for the family while its relative is hospitalized. Peterson says the family is also invited to go to therapy with the patient; thus the family, not just the patient, can learn about the disability and how best to deal with it.

Behrman's project may identify other problems that the stroke patients has after leaving the hospital. He hopes to find other ways doctors and hospitals can help with rehabilitation.

Medical care for stroke patients, as well as others with chronic diseases, is often "crisis- oriented." Doctors treat the immediate problem but little has been done on finding what to do after that. "All physicians recognize the problem," Peterson says, "but it's how to deal with it that we are trying to solve."

What's the law?

The case of the hoodwinked husband

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Harry was an educated man who knew everything and suspected nothing. Consequently, it wasn't until after he signed a separation agreement, in which he agreed to support "his" son, that he discovered, without question, that his son wasn't his son. What's more, the dastardly agreement was incorporated into a divorce decree that he hadn't even bothered to contest.

"I've been lumbered," raged Harry. And, in protest, he refused to make any further support payments for the child. The result? His erstwhile spouse hauled him into court and charged him with violating his obligations under the divorce decree.

"While he may decry the decree," she complained in court, "he's bound by it."

"While I may have been stupid," retorted Harry, "I'm not crazy. Nobody's going to make me support a kid that's not mine. While my philandering wife may have pulled the wool over my eyes, she can't go on fleecing me forever."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require hoodwinked Harry to continue to support "his" son?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that Harry had had every opportunity to question paternity before the divorce decree was entered. Instead, he entered into a separation agreement in which he recognized the child as his own, agreed to support the child and consented to the agreement being made part of the divorce decree which he did not oppose. At this late stage, concluded the judge, it was too late to rechart the course of the case.

William Lee Seals, 24, of 623 Daniel St., escaped injury when the car he was driving was struck by a southbound Frisco locomotive at 1:45 p.m. Saturday on West North Street. Police said box cars, parked on a siding near the street, blocked Seals' view of the oncoming train. The engineer was R. A. Andrews of Kennett. Police said no arrests were made. Bill Stevens, two Portageville members of Company C of the 1140th Engineer Battalion headquartered in Sikeston, survey the top of a tree to be cut down during clean- up activities at Carpenter's Cemetery about seven miles north of Sikeston near McMullin. The company spent its drill time Saturday and Sunday cleaning up the cemetery which was so overgrown with brush and trees that many of the graves markers were not visible until the brush was cleared away. Old tombstone uncovered

During clean- up activities Saturday and Sunday at Carpenter's Cemetery seven miles north of Sikeston near McMullin, many old grave markers were discovered by members of Company C of the 1140th Engineer Battalion. Some of the markers dated as far back as the 1830s, although there may have been some older ones not uncovered during the clean-up opeations. Many of the tombstones were homemade, such as the one above, and ranged from wooden crosses to a stick with a piece of plywood nailed to it with the name on it and homemade concrete tombstones. Some of the homemade stones had marbles and small ceramic figures pressed into them for decoration.

THE MIGHTIEST SWAT OF ALL.

Down through the years, baseball has had its heavy hitters . . . the sluggers who could be counted on to bring home the runs. Favorites of coaches and fans alike, these are the players who draw fans and win ball games.

Advertising has its heavy hitters too. And the mightiest swat of all is found in the smallest ads . . . the Classified ads in your newspaper. They do more things for more people at lower cost than any other form of advertising.

Call on Classified when you have a communications need . . . whether it's buying, selling, hiring, renting or just telling. It's a sure hit!

Lung Association meets in Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A demonstration of inhalation therapy was the educational part of the program at the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri's Advisory Council spring meeting held at Southeast Missouri Hospital this past week.

Bill Dubbs, inhalation therapist at the hospital demonstrated therapy equipment recently acquired by the hospital to the 36 council members and guests.

Association executive director, Mark M. Garkovich, reported that Christmas Seals returns from this year's campaign were up in comparison to last years. According to him, with the overall trend across the nation down, the totals for Eastern Missouri are evidence of community support for the programs made possible through Christmas Seal contributions.

Programs, present and future, were discussed by Murray M. Mintz, program director of the ALA of Eastern Missouri. He spoke on the need for professional education aimed at both medical and allied professionals in the area of lung disease. The council, acting in response to this presentation, appointed a committee for District IV, which is made up of the 18 counties of southeastern Missouri. Committee members are: Mrs. Sue Tippen, Butler County; Mrs. Bernice Price, Ripley County; Mrs. Betty Ross, Cape Girardeau County; Mrs. Jean Jacobs, Cape Girardeau County; and Randal Blankenship, Bollinger County.

Mrs. Jacobs was also elected to fill the term of the late Dr. Thelma Buckthorpe of Sikeston. Mrs. Edna Gibson of Cape is replacing Mrs. Dorothy New of Van Buren, who resigned from the office of secretary.

Albert Karsch, Farmington, is president of the council for District IV and serves as a board member of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri. Linus W. Bartels, is field representative for the ALA in southeastern Missouri. His address is 101 South Louisiana, Cape Girardeau, 63701, telephone: 335-8507. Area residents are encouraged to contact him or the main office at 911 Locust Street, St. Louis, 63101, telephone: 241-1554, concerning any further information about the programs of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri.

World news in brief

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Housewives don't have to worry about the price of bread soaring to $1 a loaf, the U.S. under secretary of Agriculture says. It's just something dreamed up by the baking industry.

"There's plenty of wheat available, more than we can use," declared J. Phil Campbell.

It's just that for the first time, the nation's bakers have had to go out and find available wheat, Campbell told The Associated Press Society of Ohio Saturday night. The government has stopped keeping track of it, he said.

"They came in and told us, 'There's no wheat,'" Campbell said. "We told them, 'It's there. You just have to go find it.'"

HARVEY, Ill. (AP) — A 71year-old professional flagpole sitter has been killed in a fall at a shopping center in this Chicago suburb.

Richard "Dixie" Blandy of Dayton, Ohio, was taking part in a promotional stunt at a shopping center Sunday when a cord connected to the flagpole was tightened, causing the pole to snap, police said.

Hospital officials said Blandy's skull was smashed and he suffered several internal injuries in the fall. He died three hours later.

A spokesman for a merchants association that sponsored the stunt said Blandy mounted the pole at 10 a.m. Thursday and had been scheduled to come down at 8 a.m. Sunday. The accident happened shortly before he was to come down.

DALLAS (AP) — A candidate who campaigned on marijuana reform in a central city area heavily populated by young persons was badly beaten Saturday in a state legislative primary race by a conservative black incumbent.

Jim Bigbee, 28, a 1972 McGovern delegate who once worked for the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws, got only 752 votes, about 27 per cent of those cast in the Oak Lawn district.

State Rep. Sam Hudson III, a Democrat who made hardly a ripple during his freshman legislative term in 1973, got 72 per cent.

Fewer than 2,000 persons voted in the contest.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Employes of a Nashville printing firm worked non-stop during the weekend setting type for an 898-page paperback book containing transcripts of President Nixon's Watergate conversations.

Bantam Books, Inc., Sunday flew the printing mats to Chicago where the $2.50-per-copy books will be printed. Bantam officials said copies will be on the newsstands in 30 key cities by Tuesday afternoon.

The Bantam version of the Watergate transcripts will be one of at least two such books being prepared. Dell Publishing Co. of New York is expected to have copies on the newsstands later this week.

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — British singer Tom Jones was prevented from leaving Venezuela when he tried to board a plane for the United States.

A local newsman, Manuel Olalquiaga of the "El Universal," got a court order against Jones for injuries allegedly inflicted by Jones' bodyguard.

Olalquiaga said David Perry struck him on the head last Wednesday. Perry reportedly left Venzuela the next day.

Jones reportedly was being delayed pending a court appearance today. A spokesman at Jones' London office said they received a call from him after he was stopped from leaving Sunday and he was "totally bewildered...."

Jones cabled Prime Minister Harold Wilson for aid. A spokesman said Wilson would be shown the cable after he returned from a trip.

A spokesman for Jones said the delay would cost him "tens of thousands of dollars because we will miss recording sessions scheduled for tonight in Alabama."

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's daughter, Mary Rockefeller Strawbridge, has been married to Thomas B. Morgan, who was a member of former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay's staff.

It was the second marriage for both. Their previous marriages ended in divorce.

The Sunday ceremony was held in the bride's Manhattan apartment.

Morgan, now the assistant to the publisher of New York magazine, was press secretary for Lindsay. He is from Springfield, Ill.

PARIS (AP) — Socialist Francois Mitterrand will face conservative Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing in a runoff battle for the French presidency May 19, France's voters decided Sunday. Backed by the powerful Communist party, Mitterrand led a field of 12 candidates on the first ballot with 10,935,763 votes, or 43.36 per cent of the total cast. Giscard d'Estaing, a member of the Independent Republican party, ran second with 8,286,382, or 32.85 per cent. The official Gaullist Party candidate, former Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, polled only 3,693,168 votes, or 14.64 per cent.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government showed no signs of yielding to Syrian demands today as it went into another round of troop disengagement talks with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. A government spokesman said a cabinet session Sunday produced no decisions on the next move. Health Minister Victor Shemtov told newsmen the cabinet would meet again today after its leaders talk further with Kissinger. Perhaps the toughest decision facing the Israelis was whether to modify their initial refusal to give up some of the territory they seized from Syria in the 1967 war. Kissinger is expected to return to Damascus today or tomorrow.

If you will save $100 a month with us for 15 years, we'll pay you $100 a month from then on and you'll never touch your principal.

When you read the chart, you can see that if you save a fixed monthly amount at First National Bank for 15 years, and you withdraw the same amount for the next 15 years, there's a nice surprise at the end of the period. You still have more money left than you put in.

That's because a First National Passbook Savings Account earns 5%, compounded quarterly. Over a 15- year period, it adds up.

Police said Bledsoe had been drinking and apparently thought he was at a different house.

Bledsoe was shot by Mrs. Murphy after he entered through the kitchen door.

Peace disturbance charges were filed against Bledsoe this morning by Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore.

Action on Householder is deferred until tonight

NEW MADRID-- Action to remove Marshal O. E. Householder from office has been deferred by the present City Council until after he takes the oath of office tonight and assumes a new two- year term to which he was elected without opposition on April 2.

The decision to defer was made in a special closed meeting Friday from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., which was attended by incoming mayor Jim Cravens and two newly elected aldermen, Joe Hunter and George Dawson.

Whether or not the proceeding will be continued against the marshal will be determined by the new City Council, which will be formed tonight when Cravens succeeds Mayor Robert A. Riley and Hunter and Dawson replace Aldermen Bob Blom and W. R. Phillips Jr., respectively.

Initial steps for impeachment proceedings were taken on April 22 when Riley recommended that Householder be removed from office following a fracus on April 21 between the marshal and Alderman Ras Jones.

Householder and Jones became involved in a fight outside a New Madrid tavern in which Householder allegedly fired a gun and both men were injured. Householder was off duty and reportedly both men had been drinking.

The motion for deferment of action was made by alderman Bill Boyd, seconded by Phillips and unanimously agreed to by the board of aldermen.

Others present at the meeting were Mayor Riley, City Attorney Hal E. Hunter Jr., City Clerk Pauline Allen, and Aldermen Jones, Blom and John A. Hunter. Alderman Ed LaValle was out of town.

The 20- year veteran marshal had previously been notified to appear with witnesses before the City Council at 8 p.m. Friday to show cause why action for his removal from office should not be taken.

Householder has posted $1,000 bond, pending Magistrate Court proceedings against him on a felonious assault charge filed upon complaint by Jones.

Nixon's lawyer says defense will depend on hush money role

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's chief lawyer says the President's defense against impeachment depends on whether Nixon himself was involved in hush money payments to Watergate defendants.

James D. St. Clair, White House special counsel, said Sunday the presidential tape transcripts released last week prove Nixon neither authorized nor knew of the payments and thus is innocent of any "criminal plot to obstruct justice."

St. Clair also said he considers it unrealistic to think that a constitutional dispute between Congress and the President over what amounts to an impeachable offense could be resolved in court.

In another televised interview, White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. said he hopes the leading members of the House Judiciary Committee will personally listen to the White House tapes and verify the transcripts.

Nixon said in releasing the material that Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., and Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, the senior committee Republican, could hear the actual tapes at the White House. They have not yet accepted the offer.

Haig said anyone who reads the transcripts "knows without a shadow of a doubt that there has not been much tampering with the contents of them. They speak for themselves."

Haig declined to reply directly to questions about whether the White House also would turn over evidence sought on issues other than Watergate, such as the milk fund, the ITT case and a $100,000 would-be campaign contribution by Howard Hughes.

But he added that these "are legitimate questions and for people involved to do any less than their best, they would, of course, be remiss."

Meanwhile, two members of the House panel warned against interpreting the committee's party-line vote on the transcripts as a sign of a partisan split on the impeachment issue.

After receiving edited transcripts from the White House instead of the actual tape recordings, the committee voted 20 to 18 last week to inform Nixon he had not complied fully with its subpoena.

"Few if any really thought he was in full compliance," said Rep. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md. "The difference in opinion was in the proper response."

Kennett man killed in quarrel

KENNETT — A. W. Champlin, 40, of Route Three was shot and killed Saturday afternoon by his 12 - year - old son following a family quarrel at the Champlin home.

Dunklin County Deputy Sheriff Juston Huggins said today that Champlin had been drinking and was beating his wife and 16 - year - old daughter when the boy shot him in the left temple with a .410 gauge shotgun.

The shooting was investigated by the sheriff's department and highway patrol.

Champlin's body was taken to McDaniel Funeral Home.

3 streakers arrested today

EAST PRAIRIE — Three Charleston juvenile boys were arrested about 2 a.m. today and charged with indecent exposure. One of the three youths were also charged with attempting to outrun police on foot.

The three reportedly were streaking in the nude on South Martin Street when arrested by police officers Charles Ferguson and Buck Morgan.

Juvenile authorities were notified and the boys were detained at the city hall until released into the custody of their parents.

See-Mor to seek rate hike

See- Mor Cable TV will appear before the city council at 7:30 p.m. today to ask for a 50 cent rate increase.

The council rejected a See- Mor request for a $1.50 rate hike last November.

Other items on the agenda will be a 3.2 per cent beer license for Ken's Pizza Parlor, East Malone Ave., and appointments to municipal boards.

Drowning victim found

NEW HAMBURG — The body of Thomas Anthony Glastetter, 19, was recovered from Heisserer's Lake one mile north of New Hamburg along Highway 61 at 11 p.m. Friday, eight hours after a canoe capsized and dumped him and a compansion, David Zeigler of Illmo, into the water.

Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said Glastetter and Zeigler were in the canoe while a third member of the party, Jim Smith of Chaffee, waited on the shore. When the canoe capsized and the two young men were left floundering in the water, Smith took a john boat and attempted to get to the spot where the boat overturned about 100 yards from shore.

Glastetter climbed onto the overturned boat, and Smith tried to get to Zeigler to help him to shore. Zeigler either was helped or floated to shore, but Glastetter slipped from the boat or tried to swim to shore and disappeared.

Searchers from the sheriff's office, the Sikeston Volunteer Emergency Rescue Unit, Scott City police, Sikeston police and Cape Girardeau County sheriff's department dragged the lake until the body was recovered by John Forrest of Sikeston and Patrick Buehrle of Columbia.

The body was located in about 20 feet of water about 30 yards from shore.

During the dragging operation the surface of lake was illuminated like daylight by portable lighting equipment brought to the scene by Ray Clinton Construction Co. of Sikeston.

Scott County Coroner Gene Nunnelee ruled that death was caused by accidental drowning.

Funeral services for Glastetter were conducted at 10 a.m. today in St. Ambrose Catholic Church at Chaffee by the Rev. James Holmes, pastor.

Burial was in the church cemetery.

Pallbearers were Jim Smith, Jim Harper, Tim Stiemle, Richard Hodge, Elmer Enderle and Roger Glueck.

Born May 18, 1954, he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Glastetter, who survive.

Glastetter was a 1972 graduate of Chaffee High School, where he was a star football player and won all-state recognition as a defensive tackle.

He was employed as a cutter at the Thorngate Ltd. plant in Chaffee and was a member of St. Ambrose Catholic Church.

On June 30, 1973, he married Darla Cobb of Chaffee, who survives.

Also surviving are seven brothers, Stanley and Leslie Glastetter of Chaffee and Tim, Bryan, Barry, Carl and Eric Glastetter of the home; one sister, Mrs. Charles Wipsler of Jackson; and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. George Glueck of Chaffee.

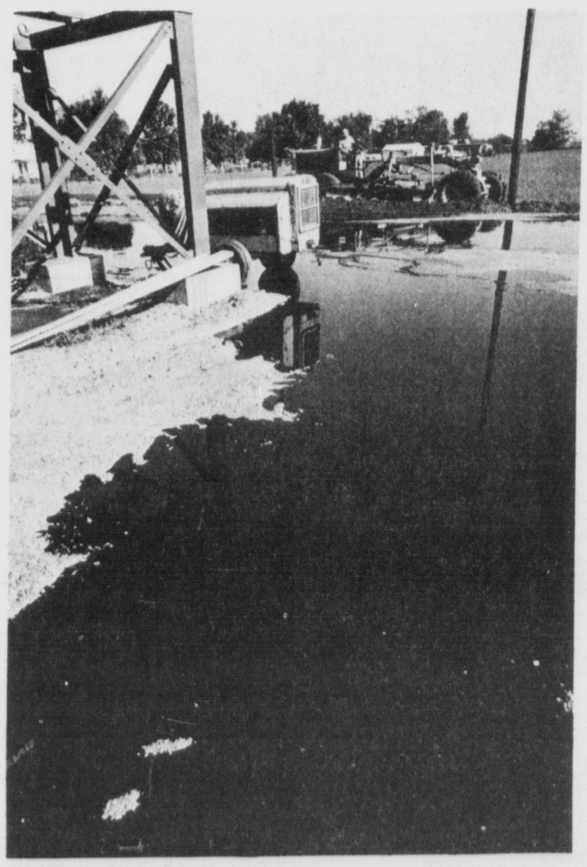
Prisoner sets fire to pillow

A prisoner set fire to a pillow at 10:35 p.m. Sunday in the city jail, filling the cell area with dense smoke, according to police.

Officer Tommy Green said he discovered the trouble after a prisoner yelled fire and Green opened the door to find the area filled with smoke.

Green said he discovered the burning pillow outside one of the cells while he was moving the prisoners to safety. Police said they have not determined which prisoners set the pillow on fire.

A fire truck was not sent to the jail, but Fire Chief Larry Linnemeyer said it took his department's smoke ejector about an hour and a half to clear the area of smoke.



Asphalt spills

Seven thousand gallons of heavy liquid asphalt poured out of a tank Sunday at the W. S. McMullin Construction Co. asphalt plant on Route AA in Miner after someone opened one of the valves. Workmen began cleaning up the mess today (left photo). Company officials estimated the loss of liquid asphalt at $2,000. Ten pigs owned by Ralph Woods, who lives just north of the plant, wandered into the asphalt and became covered with the sticky goo. The pig on the right (bottom photo) became mired in the asphalt and had to be pulled out by hand and may die. Company officials theorized that children playing on the sand and gravel piles may have opened the valve.

DUCK HUNTERS ARISE

Inflation and Wategate get the headlines. But seething behind them in Washington is an issue that is important to you if you happen to be one of the millions of American sportsmen who enjoy hauling out the scattergun each fall and going after ducks and geese.

The Department of Interior, if it gets its way, intends to change the pattern of waterfowl hunting across the country by forcing all shooters to use steel instead of lead shot. The reason, according to the Department, is that thousands of ducks and geese are fatally poisoned each year by lead shotgun pellets which they scoop up from marshbottoms as they forage for food.

The hitch, however, is that the problem of lead poisoning is almost wholly confined to two of the nation's four corridors, known as "flyways," where ducks and geese fly and feed when migrating. Problem areas are the Atlantic Flyway and — to a lesser extent — the Mississippi Flyway. The other two flyways, Central and Pacific, are free of the problem except for isolated feeding areas.

State fish and game officials in the Central and Pacific Flyways — which cover the western half of the United States — argue convincingly that they should be allowed to correct the problem in the few cases where it exists, rather than being forced to participate in a national solution to a problem that is not national in scope.

Opponents of the steel shot proposal, which is still pending a final decision by Interior Department officials, argue that the harder pellets will be more expensive, will damage shotguns, and will be less effective in killing waterfowl. In a recent press release, the Department admitted that, at a range greater than about 45 yards, "steel shot is likely to be less effective than lead." One certain consequence of using steel rather than lead shotgun pellets would be that more waterfowl would be crippled rather than cleanly killed.

Sen. James A. McClure (R-Idaho) has introduced a bill to prohibit the Interior Department from issuing any order regarding the use of steel shot for waterfowl until the issue can be studied in public hearings before the Senate Interior Committee. We urge approval of Sen. McClure's bill.

WAIT A MINUTE!

Proposals are in the works to add about 52 million acres of the nation's forest lands to the 10 million acres already set aside as single - use wilderness acres. In this instance, single use means primarily for recreational purposes. According to a timber industry authority, "This is equivalent to about 12 per cent of all commercial forest land in the United States."

Before setting aside millions of additional acres of timberland in nonproductive preserves, the timber company spokesman recommends certain steps. These include state- by- state land use studies. These studies would produce reliable estimates of demands for forest products, for urban and industrial development, for highways, power lines and for all forms of outdoor recreation. He proposes that such studies be standardized for the whole country so state- by - state figures can be put together to provide regional and national summaries. He urges that until such studies are complete, all presently proposed federal changes in land use be held in abeyance.

Timberland, like nearly every other productive activity and resource in the country, has been a victim of what amounts to a blind crusade aimed directly at immobilizing intelligent efforts of governmental and business leaders to balance the needs of people with the requirements of conservation and preservation. The timber industry has become one of the most progressive enterprises in the latter respect. As the timber spokesman comments, "... the forests of America are probably in better health, growing more wood fiber, better protected from serious loss by fire, and contributing more to the health and welfare of the nation than ever before ..." Wise management, not emotional crusades, is destined to be the savior of America's resources.

PEOPLE BRANDING

The Senate Finance Committee has proposed that all children entering the first grade after January 1, 1974, must be assigned Social Security numbers. The purpose of the proposal sounds plausible. It is to prevent Social Security swindlers from applying under more than one name for welfare checks.

An old- fashioned editor comments that, "... designating an individual, from childhood to death, by a single identification number has connotations alien to traditional American liberty. Not only could a computer spew out a person's life history at the pushing of a button, but the trend away from personal identity ... would be accelerated."

If we are to submit to such a philosophy of people watching, we may one day see the government following a practice similar to the calf branding used by western cattlemen. For example, a law could require that each child's number be tatooed on its right shoulder at birth — or left if the bureaucrats so desired. Such a law would probably end freedom, but it sure would solve all identity problems and virtually guarantee that government handouts would go to the righ people.

IN PRAISE OF PAPERS POOPERS

A survey by Scripps - Howard News Service of the records of the federal government's General Services Administration reveals that President Nixon was hardly alone in claiming a tax deduction for his personal papers.

Lyndon B. Johnson, both as president and vice president, former vice president Hubert Humphrey, Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, cabinet members, presidential advisors and a host of top- and middle - echelon officials in the last five national administrations, as well as three journalists and authors, made tax-deductible donations of their papers between 1963 and 1969 to the National Archives, presidential libraries or local historical societies.

The matter would be academic now, since Congress abolished this provision of the tax laws effective July 25, 1969, except that it is an example of how the spreading stain of Watergate has touched people not even remotely connected with that scandal.

Then, too, there is the very live question of the propriety, if not the legality, of President Nixon's gift of his vice presidential papers which a joint congressional committee is looking into, at his request.

Were it not for Watergate, it is unlikely that any of this information would ever have become public knowledge. Even if it had, were it not for Watergate again, it is unlikely that much ado would have been made about it.

But whatever the term "Watergate" comes to signify in the history books, for the present generation of Americans it has brought an acutely heightened sensitivity to the ethical behavior of government officials.

The ordinary citizen may well ask why men who were elected or appointed to positions of public trust and prominence should ever have been permitted tax write-offs for materials they acquired simply by virtue of attaining such positions. Documents accumulated in the public service ought to belong to the public — period.

It is interesting to note that the Scripps- Howard list contains no names of representatives or senators donating personal papers, which may be one reason why Congress eventually abolished this particular "loophole."

However it came about, it is well that the practice is ended.

One of the fallacies we live by, according to the American Economic Foundation, is that economic controls can cure inflation. But there's an old Chinese proverb which states, "He who rides a tiger dismounts at his own peril." In other words, it's easier to start than to stop. And that's true with government controls.

Most controls are urged by special interest groups who pressure the government into selective economic programs. But historically, controls have never worked. It's like trying to move a single marble in a jar full of marbles. Each leans on the other.

Every economic action brings on reaction followed by still other reactions. For example, we sold too much grain to Russia last year. That created a domestic shortage which drove up the cost of feed for cattle and chickens which were under price controls.

With reduced profits in sight, ranchers cut back production. This in turn put price pressure on pork and fish which were not controlled. Thus, the marbles moves and moved to no one's benefit.

The simple cure for shortages and high prices is to permit the law of supply and demand to work. In a free economy it doesn't take long for suppliers to enter a market where profits are available.

The most unchangeable factor in economics is human nature. Man is profit oriented. When denied the freedom to earn as much as possible, man's performance is reduced. But when allowed to develop his maximum income, he can often work economic miracles.

Unfortunately, making the world better for someone else but not yourself is hardly conducive to great effort. It's also difficult for a politician to tell people who are chafing under high prices that the solution is to let prices become temporarily higher.

Tenants of an apartment building were disturbed one night by sounds of someone running in the apartment above. The noise stopped after a few minutes, but occurred on the next two nights.

On the fourth night, instead of the noise of running, there was a series of heavy thuds and thumps. The angry tenant marched upstairs, pounded on the door of the apartment and demanded of the woman who came to the door to know what was going on.

"I wish people would mind their own business," said the woman. "My husband has been ill and the doctor gave him some medicine and told him to take it three nights running and then skip one night."

WHICH DO WE WANT?

One of the underlying issues of election year 1972 is redistribution of income and wealth. The old populist cry of "Soak the rich!" has assumed a subtler tone. Now they talk of tax reform, and the goal is to turn legitimate reform into a revolutionary tool. Thus the moment has come when ordinary citizens must seek to understand certain fundamentals about where and how money is raised to keep the productive mechanism of a country running.

In an editorial, entitled "The New Populism ...", a publication of the First National City Bank has this to say on the subject, "In the United States, a large proportion of the invested capital funds is drawn from retained earnings of corporations and savings of middle - and high - income families. The well of private savings can be drawn down, even emptied, by new and higher taxes on corporations and individuals. But if that is done, the federal government will have to provide an alternative mechanism for the formation of capital. Experience in Russia and other countries where capital formation is the province of highly centralized bureaucracies has not been happy."

In communist countries, where government has abolished sources of private capital, investment in job - creating enterprises is done by the state. The production of goods and services is based upon compulsion. Capital formation is a simple process of levying taxes. In the U. S., under the capitalistic system, investment is voluntary, and the businesses and industries this voluntary investment creates provide rich sources of tax revenue for all levels of government. This is the American system that is under attack. Populist tax reformers merely wish to substitute compulsory investment by taxpayers for voluntary investment by free citizens. The question is which system do the American people want?

EQUAL SPACE

The First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution is vital in that it guarantees freedom of speech and press. That same amendment, however, does not call for malicious and unproved charges against individuals. The press must police itself and in many instances this is done. In recent years, the news media have developed adversary journalism which ranges correspondents and editors against officialdom and institutions and too often accusations are leveled by direct means and innuendo when there are no facts to support the allegations.

The laws of libel offer a measure of protection to victims of slander but the Sullivan decision of the Supreme Court of the U. S. practically laid naked public officials who are attacked by the media. Adversary journalism in recent years has been aimed primarily at officialdom. It is good for the press and radio and television news to be vigilant but they should confine their reporting to facts and fairness.

One remedy can be offered to the public by the media now. It can provide equal time and space to those who are named in stories that are of a derogatory nature or which relate events that others might see in a different light. The Florida Supreme Court has upheld a 1913 statute requiring newspapers to give equal space to persons who come under editorial attack. We feel this is a good law and that it should be adopted nationally. In a sense of fair play, all sides of a story should be presented to the public. Freedom of the press should -- and does-- imply responsibility of the press. HLH

WASHINGTON-- The toughest thing for a business executive when he retires is to realize that, after a long career of directing people and making major multimillion- dollar decisions, he has no one to order around and no vital business problems to resolve. While this is very frustrating for the retired man, it's even rougher on his wife.

The other day Zuckert's wife came over to see me. Zuckert had been a very successful vice president of a large corporation and has been retired for six months. Mrs. Zuckert was beginning to show the strains.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," she said. "Abbot's driving me up the wall. He's running the house just the way he used to run the business."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"All the drive and energy that went into his 35- year career is now being directed toward me. I am no longer a housewife. I am now vice president in charge of household management. By summer, he said, spinach could be in short supply, and we could make a killing in it.

"I replied that we couldn't keep spinach until the summertime and, since there were only two of us, there was just so much we could consume. He said sometimes you have to take chances when you're running a household or the competition will kill you. He ordered me to set up a research and development department so we could find a way to keep spinach fresh until summer."

"You really have your hands full," I told Mrs. Zuckert.

"You don't know what I've been going through," she said.

"Every time I come home, Abbot has a new chart in the kitchen showing accounts receivable, cash outflow expenses and income. He keeps talking about increased production and slashing labor costs. Since I'm the only labor in the house, it obviously makes me very nervous."

"Who wouldn't be?" I asked.

"The worst things are his memos. Every night I find one on my pillow pointing out a household management mistake I had made that day. This includes cooking, housecleaning, marketing and getting rid of the garbage.

"Abbot insists that I haven't been running the house at full efficiency, and there is a great deal of overlapping of duties. He's instituted a systems control so we can cut costs and, as he puts it, 'get a bigger bang for the buck.' "

"Abbot always was cost-conscious," I said.

"He's called for a complete revision of our inventory accounting methods. This means we can't store too many cans of chicken soup in the closet at one time.

"He wants me to keep my shopping lists in triplicate, and to submit requisitions to the executive committee before I buy any household appliances over $25. When he first retired, I humored him about it. I realized he was in a decompression tank, and it would take time before he realized he was no longer in business.

"But instead of getting better, it's getting worse. Last night he asked me if I intended to take a position on spinach. I said I hadn't given it any thought, and he pointed out that a supermarket was having a sale on spinach and it might be a good time to buy up as much as we could. Last week for my birthday he bought me a large sign with one word on it, THINK."

"I have an idea," I told Mrs. Zuckert. "Why don't you threaten to resign?"

"I have," she replied tearfully, "and he said if I did I would lose m[illegible]usion plan."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

How Dean Fingered Nixon

WASHINGTON-- The dramatic story can now be told how President Nixon came under investigation by the original Watergate prosecutors. They laid the groundwork a year ago for the present impeachment proceedings.

The sequence began in mid-April, 1973, when ex- White House counsel John Dean gave prosecutors Earl Silbert, Seymour Glanzer and Donald Campbell fragments of the Watergate story. They sent him back to get documents and put together a coherent account.

Sources close to the investigation, however, say Dean carefully kept the President out of his confessions until the last week of April. Then Dean, as part of his plea bargaining for a deal for himself, played his big ace.

His attorney, Charles Shaffer, notified the prosecutors on April 23 that Dean "could deliver the President," our sources report. They were given an outline of the testimony that Dean later delivered, implicating President Nixon in the Watergate cover-up.

Up to that moment, the prosecutors had believed the President was not involved. They had provided Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen, therefore, with the complete details of their investigation for relay to the President.

Because of the possibility that the President had been a party to the crimes they were investigating, the prosecutors decided they had to shut off the flow of information to the White House.

They had a showdown with Petersen over this on the night of April 25. They contended that the President was now a suspect and could no longer be told what was going on inside the grand jury.

The shocked Petersen insisted they had no business investigating the President. In any event, he said, he could never withhold information from the President of the United States.

The following day, Petersen impressed his views on U. S. Attorney Harold Titus, who stood between him and the prosecutors on the ladder of authority.

"We have to draw the line," Petersen told Titus. "We have no mandate to investigate the President."

The next link in our story is provided by the White House tapes. President Nixon got wind that Dean was implicating him in the Watergate crimes and summoned Petersen to the Oval Office the evening of April 27.

"We have gotten a report," said the President, "that, ah. that really we've got to head them off at the pass. Because it's so damned, so damn dangerous to the Presidency...Information indicating that Dean has made statements to the prosecuting team implicating the President...Now, Henry, this I've got to know."

Petersen agreed to try to find out what Dean was telling the prosecutors. But Petersen warned apologetically that he was having trouble with the prosecutors.

"We had a kind of crisis of confidence night before last..." he said, "whether or not they were at ease with my reporting to you..."

But the President was adamant. "If Dean is implicating the Presidency," snapped Nixon, "we are going to damned well find out about it."

He insisted that Petersen phone the prosecutors from the White House and find out what Dean was telling them. Petersen obediently put through the call and learned that Shaffer had approached the prosecutors with an offer of evidence against the President.

Petersen immediately reported this back to the President. Quoting the prosecutors, Petersen said Shaffer told them: "We will bring the President in-- not this case but in other things."

Our sources say the prosecutors agreed with Petersen that they had no authority over the President. They even drafted a memo giving their opinion that, legally, the President couldn't be indicted but could only be impeached.

They thought it was their duty, however, to get all the facts about Watergate. So they went ahead with their efforts to get Dean's evidence against the President. They were in the process of preparing the evidence to lay before the grand jury when the Watergate investigation was taken away from them and turned over to a Special Prosecutor.

But the Special Prosecutor picked up where they left off. The record was made before the grand jury and turned over to the House for an impeachment inquiry, as they had recommended.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Nixon's former right bower, H. R. Haldeman, kept cash stashed around the White House and in the apartments of aides. One former aide, Fred LaRue, led his lawyers to some cash that figured in the Watergate case. It was stuffed in a brown manila envelope in an open White House file drawer. They lawyers took the envelope to a nearby bank and dumped out $128,000 in loose cash...

During the 1972 campaign, Nixon aides squandered money on everything from champagne breakfasts to break- ins. But there was one exception, White House liaison man Fred Malek, who tried vainly to keep down expenses. In a secret memo complaining about a $3,500 dinner for businessmen at Washington's soignee Madison Hotel, Malek told campaign aides: "I believe it is important to have a first class event for people of (this) caliber." But really, he said acidly, "$42 per head for cocktails and dinner does seem a bit steep"...

We recently told how two U. S. mining companies in South Africa abused their black employes, blaming the government for forcing racist policies upon them. In contrast, Mobil Oil has boldly given its black employes in South Africa pensions, medical and home ownership plans, higher salaries and major job upgradings. The measures were taken in consultation with U. S. religious leaders

Bloody Showdown:

National Catholic, Jewish, Protestant Clergy Rally To Chavez In Final Clash With Teamsters

WASHINGTON-- It's "May time, that's rebel time," an old radical used to say as massed May Day banners, held aloft, went by on the country's cities' streets. But today May time is Cesar Chavez's time, harvest time in the fields ranging from the California-Mexican border right up the state which any day now he will hit with a "series of representation strikes." According to his spiritual mentor and counsellor, Msgr. George Higgins, these stoppages will run "until the end of the summer" in the table grapes and lettuce ranches.

The issue is not Chavez's strength. He has the strength of many in George Meany's AFL-CIO, Leonard Woodcock's auto workers and Arnold Miller's mine workers. Nor will Chavez's United Farm Workers lack funds.

Chavez's little union had net assets of $1,449,429 at the end of 1972. And during the following year or so other labor leaders poured in some $3 million and considerable manpower in the conflict with the massive Teamsters brotherhood.

Charismatic as is La Causa (The Cause) of the little farm workers leader, who has deified Mahatma Gandhi, Bob Kennedy and Martin Luther King, Jr., the war now actually is a sprawling jurisdictional conflict. Sooner or later it will hit virtually every large supermarket and food chain in virtually every major city.

What makes this jurisdictional strike different from all others is the self-involvement of the nation's clergy. Practically all the clergy. Not just the National Conference of Catholic Bishops but the United Church of Christ, the Presbytery of New York City, and the Synagogue Council of America, just to name a few of the clerical organizations which have rallied to Chavez.

True, some clergy swung behind the costly Amalgamated Clothing Workers (AFL- CIO) boycott of Farah slacks. But the union spent its own $2 million during its successful traditional strike and boycott. Its leaders, President Murray Finley and Secretary- Treasurer Jack Sheinkman, directed their own strategy. They swung the national and international labor movement behind them.

But in the migrant farm workers' war, which will see much blood shed, many heads cracked and perhaps bombings too, the clergy has been in the vanguard of Chavez's small union. Now, of course, Meany is mobilizing the AFL- CIO's 900 city and state central bodies. The war is on. He has dispatched documents giving advice on almost every minute detail to force off the nation's retail shelves any table grapes or lettuce picked by the Teamsters who now have 99 per cent of the California contracts.

Meany is getting powerful support. Just the other day New York's new Democratic Mayor Abe Beame directed the city's Department of Purchase not to buy or even accept bids for lettuce (for the city's hospitals and institutions) from anyone who deals with the Teamsters in the field. This takes daring and loyalty to the AFL- CIO in a city in which there are some 175,000 tightly organized Teamsters.

In one fashion or another this is true of other heavily unionized communities-- Detroit, for example. No simple conflict this: The Teamsters won't budge. Their argument, strangely enough, was best articulated recently by Jimmy Hoffa. He said:

"You have to understand the economics of canneries, drivers and field workers, concerning the desire of the Teamsters Union to protect the members they have in the canning industry...in the warehousing and transportation industry, with an irresponsible union that reserves the right to call strikes that could eventually, in a matter of days, lay off hundreds of thousands of people we have in the Teamsters Union, as against the very minimal number of people who work in the fields...

"So it is common sense that the Teamsters Unions have tied into the canneries, the warehouses and drivers, the field workers that produce the merchandise that keep the other part of the industry operating."

However, without the power to strike at critical harvest time-- the growers' make- or- break season-- Chavez's spiritual, physical and fiscal support means little. That's why Chavez told one important Senate official he'll never give it up. He just doesn't trust any government agency. Certainly not the National Labor Relations Board. He just doesn't want any law which would prevent his striking the lush ripe fields at harvest time-- no compulsory arbitration. No cooling- off period as in Taft-Hartley.

The Teamsters charge, according to the Senate official, that they won't agree to elections in the field without government supervision because they don't trust Chavez. They charge he would bring in "ringers," Chicanos who are not field workers, for the polling.

So it's a stand- off. The Teamsters won't back down. Neither will Meany. Nor Chavez. The balance of power therefore appears to be not the Congress but the clergy. They are, in Biblical terms, girding for the Armageddon. Their pulpits and most of their media are targeting in on Frank Fitzsimmons's Teamsters. A Biblical Solomon is needed before armies literally clash in the vineyards. And on some hot pavements, too. May Day, May Day. May Day

'Parolees can be denied common law marriage'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Prison parolees can be prohibited from having common-law marriages, an attorney general's opinion said Friday.

The opinion said the state Board of Probation and Parole may set rules regarding parolees from Missouri prisons and parolees sent to Missouri under the interstate compact for supervision of parolees and probationers.

The board's rules forbid common-law marriages, which were made illegal by a 1921 state law.

Man shot following argument

KENNETT-- Carl Faries, in his early 30s, of Rector, Ark. is in Campbell Clinic in Memphis, Tenn. with gunshot wounds, following an argument Friday night with Fredie Joe Martin, 24, of Kennett at the Martin home.

A spokesman for Kennett police said today Martin told police the argument between the two men began at a Kennett tavern. Faries later went to the Martin home where the argument resumed.

Martin said he grabbed a gun off a wall and was going to scare Faries when Faries grabbed the barrel and the gun discharged.

No charges have been filed.

Teacher tells ugly duckling she really isn't ugly at all

Dear Ann Landers: I saw myself in your column a few days ago, the child with the two pretty sisters and a mother who favored the "beauties."

When I was a small child I remember mama taking us out for walks and always pulling my hood down over my face or wrapping a scarf around my head so only my eyes would show. My sisters looked like dad's side of the family, all of them blonde, blue- eyed and beautiful. Once a neighbor mentioned this to mama and asked, "Who does THAT one resemble?" Her answer cut me like a knife. She said, "Someone must have dropped her on our doorstep."

I grew up thinking I was the ugliest, most worthless thing in the world. It affected everything I did. I actually hated to look in the mirror.

A wonderful person changed my life. She was my fifth- grade teacher. That wise lady sensed my anguish and kept me after school one day. She told me I was really quite a nice- looking girl, that my face was "interesting" and when I grew older I would probably be considered very attractive. She asked me to stay after school frequently to "help her." We had many talks and I can truthfully say that wise and generous lady gave me a truly new outlook on life.

I hope all teachers everywhere will read this letter carefully. It will give them some insight into the importance of kindness and emotional support to the less attractive student. God bless Miss B., wherever she is.-- Grown Up And Grateful

Dear Grateful: Thank you for a beautiful letter. Has it ever occurred to you to make an effort to locate Miss B. and tell her what she did for you? I hope the woman is still living. It's so much nicer when you can give flowers to a person who can smell them.

Dear Ann Landers: A year ago my husband asked me to join a club called "W. S. Unlimited." He heard about it at work and knew three members. He said it would help add zest to our marriage and he was very enthusiastic about it.

After the first meeting I got the idea. It was a Wife-Swapping group. I hated the idea from the beginning but decided to go along with it because it was so important to him. The people were creepy. Many of the women told me it made their lives exciting and they really enjoyed it a lot.

Well, I'll tell you what it did for me. It made me despise myself and my husband for bringing this ugly, rotten thing into our lives. When I think of what I have done I get sick to my stomach. I must have been out of my mind to have agreed to this insane set- up.

I am filing for divorce and I hope to God I never again see another member of W. S. Unltd., man or woman, as long as I live.-- Shamefaced In Manhattan

Dear S. F.: About five years ago when I first started to receive letters about such clubs I found it hard to believe they actually existed. Then several couples wrote joint letters telling me what a shot in the arm it had given their marriages. I came to the conclusion that they were bonkers and I told them so.

Thanks for your testimonial, dear. Now that you have scraped the scum off yourself I wish you luck in making a new life.

Confidential to Can't Live Without Him: Yes you can. And it will be a better life, I assure you. Bite the bullet, baby, and don't look back. Your future is ahead of you.

Book Review

THE OBSESSION OF EMMET BOOTH
by Martha Albrand
(Avon 18010/$.95
190 pp.)

Martha Albrand, Avon's "Mistress of Romantic Intrigue," departs both from her usual setting in Europe and her usual thematic concerns in the OBSESSION OF EMMET BOOTH, now an Avon paperback. Reviewers have noted that in the novel, which is based in the United States, "Martha Albrand has deserted her usual field, that of the active escape and chase, fora subtler form of pursuit novel."

Emmet Booth, an under-educated, unattractive, self-made millionaire, meets Miranda Page and sees in her the embodiment of the gentility which has eluded him. He pursues her through New York, England, and France, and when he cannot successfully buy her love, he resorts to cruel trickery. Martha Albrand creates a mixture of psychopathic infatuation and psychological suspense which prompted one reviewer to write, "For all the absence of bludgeons and bloodshed, it is as chilling a horror story as this reader has ever read."

Women alcoholics have pregnancy risks

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who are chronic alcoholics during pregnancy risk bearing physically and mentally deficient offspring and sometimes even early death for these children, a team of Seattle pediatric researchers reports.

They say the risk is sufficiently high that physicians should seriously consider recommending "early pregnancy termination"—abortion—for chronically alcoholic women.

Dr. Kenneth L. Jones and several colleagues of the University of Washington School of Medicine made the statements in a report Thursday to a joint meeting of the American Pediatric Society and the Society for Pediatric Research.

They described results of their latest research on what they call the "fetal alcohol syndrome."

In previously published preliminary reports, the scientists have defined the syndrome as a pattern of altered growth and development observed among children of chronically alcoholic mothers and believed to have its origin within the womb itself.

Manifestations of the condition include cranial-facial, limb and cardiovascular defects.

In their new report, the Seattle researchers said they have now evaluated the records of 23 offspring of chronically alcoholic mothers and data on a comparable number of offspring of nonalcoholic mothers.

Among the offspring of the alcoholic women, 17 per cent died shortly after birth; 32 percent of the survivors were considered to have the "fetal alcohol syndrome" and 44 per cent had intelligence quotients (IQs) of 79 or below at 7 years of age.

In contrast, among offspring of the nonalcoholic mothers, only 2 per cent died soon after birth; none of the survivors showed "fetal alcohol" symptoms and only 9 per cent had IQs 79 or below at age 7.

Burlison says Watergate will damage GOP ticket

FREDERICKTOWN — "Watergate will damage the entire Republican ticket in 1974, but will not be as effective a campaign issue for the Democrats as will be the President's mismanagement of the economy and energy crisis," Rep. Bill D. Burlison stated in an address at the 10th District Missouri Federation of Women's Democratic Clubs meeting at noon, Saturday in the Long Horn Restaurant on Highway 67.

The Cape Girardeau Democrat outlined congressional and presidential action respecting wage and price controls and emphasized how history always repeats itself with highest interest rates under Republican presidential leadership.

Burlison said the President had prevented passage of the emergency energy bill which was debated the last three days before adjournment, prior to Christmas. He said the House- passed bill provided for a tax on windfall profits of the large oil corporations, as well as providing for the companies to disclose the amount of their oil reserves.

The oil- producing states and large oil corporations were very much opposed to these provisions and with the aid of the President succeeded in preventing passage of the bill with these provisions, he remarked.

Burlison said Democrats have continued to support those provisions as debate on the bill has been renewed in the second session of the 93rd Congress. Congressional action has again been taken on the bill and it is now on the President's desk for a second veto, or his signature.

"Congress has finally made progress in limiting Presidential encroachment on legislative functions," the congressman said in mentioning passage of the war powers resolution over the President's veto which precludes prolonged involvement of U. S. forces in foreign wars without affirmative approval of the Congress.

3 injured in area traffic

A Cape Girardeau woman was seriously injured and two other area residents received minor injuries in two area traffic accidents over the weekend, according to the highway patrol.

Jean Ann Brunke, 21, received a serious cut at 5:30 p.m. Sunday .4 mile north of Wappapello Dam on Route D when her motorcycle ran off the road at a high rate of speed and struck a highway sign.

A passenger, Francis Anthony Merkler, 19, of Cape Girardeau suffered minor injuries. Both were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Charles Hinkebein, 21, of Chaffee was injured at 11:30 p.m. Saturday two miles south of Chaffee on Highway 77 when he fell asleep at the wheel of his pickup truck which ran off the road and struck a culvert.

He was taken to Chaffee General Hospital.

FHA Family of Year named

COLUMBIA — The Hal Walls family of Bragg City has been named Missouri's Farmers Home Administration Farm Family of the Year, according to an announcement by John O. Foster, FHA state director.

The Walls family is representative of approximately 8,000 FHA farm borrowers in Missouri. They have demonstrated the progress that can be made with full utilization of available land, labor and capital.

First State Bank of Caruthersville will sponsor a luncheon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walls on June 7. Congressman Bill D. Burlison, a former Pemiscot Countian, will speak at the cememony. A special plaque will be presented to the Walls family by Sperry-New Holland Co., the national sponsor. Agricultural leaders, state and local officials, farmers and rural residents will attend.

The Bragg City family is the fourth that has been honored in the Farmers Home Administration's state "Farm Family of the Year" program. The award was established in 1970 as a means of honoring families who have demonstrated outstanding progress as farmers and rural citizens. Farming methods, financial progress, family living, property improvement, community leadership and overcoming adversities are some of the criteria used in making the selection.

As recipient of Missouri's Farm Family Award, the Wallses will not compete for national farm family honors.

The proposed plan will be explained, and City Manager Bob Kakac and members of the City Council will be present to answer questions.

Gibson beats Houston, 3-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Veteran pitcher Bob Gibson doesn't throw as hard as in the past, but it was not necessary against the Houston Astros Sunday.

Gibson, 38, limited the Astros to five hits in eight inning as the St. Louis Cardinals stopped Houston, 3-1.

It snapped a five- game Houston winning streak and it boosted Gibson's lifetime record against hte Astros to 29-13. That's the best record any pitcher in the National League has against Houston.

Reggie Smith contributed a two- run homer for the Cardinals — his sixth of the season.

Gibson didn't pitch the ninth. His bad knee which he had surgery on during the off- season, began acting up and Mike Garman finished up without allowing a base runner.

St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst said Gibson's knee started bothering him in the seventh when he had some control problems.

"He said it was all right in the eighth but you could see he wasn't driving off the mound like he can."

However, Astros Manager Preston Gomez was impressed with Gibson.

"He doesn't throw as hard anymore but he 's still a helluva pitcher," Gomez said. "He got tired, that's all. You could see he was running out of gas."

Gomez also was impressed with Larry Dierker, his starting pitcher, who gave up seven hits and three Cardinal runs.

"Dierker pitched good enough to win, too," Gomez said. "It's just we're not getting him any runs."

Gibson seemed to think the pitcher's mound was too flat and this caused him to have congrol problems at times.

"My slider was breaking in front of the plate," he said.

St. Louis scored one run in the second on Bake McBride's double and Mike Tyson's single.

Smith's home run in the sixth followed a single by Luis Alvarado.

Houston put up a big threat against Gibson in the seventh but managed only one run.

After Gibson walked both Doug Rader and Tommy Helms, Bob Gallagher singled to center to score Rader and send Helms to third.

Pinch- hitter Milt May then flied deep to right. It backed Smith to the wall and ended up in a double play as Smith's throw caught Gallagher trying to get back to first. Helms attempted to score on the play but the umpire ruled the out at first occurred before he reached home plate.

Ken Ressel was the losing hurler, despite connecting for a home run. New Hamburg hosts Oran Wednesday night.

Vanduser used the six hit pitching of Jimmy Johnson to roll up it s opening season victory.

Wayne Limbaugh led an eight hit Vanduser offensive attack with three safeties, including a run scoring triple in the first inning.

Security National Bank jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but failed to contain the hard hitting Vanduser nine, who evened the score in the fourth when Chris Dover slammed a home run.

Terry Brown broke the deadlock with a two run single in the fifth for a 4-2 lead. Larry Jones honored for Sikeston in the bottom of the inning to make the score 4-3, but a three run sixth inning put the game away for Vanduser, who goes to Benton Wednesday night.

Turkey season successful

JEFFERSON CITY- Weather put a dent in the second half of Missouri's wild turkey season over much of the state, as rains hampered hunters.

But through the first weekend of the April 22-May 4 season, hunting success was running about even with that of 1973, a record season.

Hunters had taken fewer birds in the east central region, one of the two heaviest bag areas in the state, but had taken more in the Ozark region, the other prime gobbler hunting spot.

Leading county through the first week was Ste. Genevieve with 212 birds. Other high counties included Dent with 182, Texas with 181, Wayne with 171 and Washington with 170.

Only one male turkey or one bearded bird is legal--most bearded birds are gobblers, though hens occasionally do have beards. North- central Missouri reported five bearded hens taken, as well as one bearded albino hen from Lincoln County.

Almost all areas are reporting a heavy adult to young ratio, bearing out indications that there was a poor wild turkey hatch in 1973 because of wet weather.

It was a season of exceptional turkey stories, if not exceptional hunting. The largest turkey reported was a whopping 28 pound, 10 ounce bird, taken by Harry Gegg Jr., Ste. Genevieve, only 10 minutes after the May 22 opener on a farm he and his father own. Don Prenger, Jefferson City, took a 27 pounder in Osage County near Folk.

The state record bird for weight is 33 pounds, 13 ounces, taken two seasons ago by Bob Stephens of Salem.

Ernest Walker, Bloomsdale, took an all-white wild turkey, which was verified as a wild bird by Department of Conservation wildlife biologist Leroy Korschgen, west of Bloomsdale.

The bird was not an albino-- it had a dark beard and normal eyes, not pink eyes. It weighed 10 pounds, 14 ounces. There have been several white wild turkeys reported in the area and Walker had heard the stories.

One of the more remarkable hunters is 19 year old William Carron of Bloomsdale. He has taken five birds in six years, including one this season with a bow and arrow. There have been only a handful of bow kills since modern seasons opened in 1960.

Although turkeys normally have a home range of a mile or two, JuDon Frambrough, Purdy, bagged a 23 pound, 12 ounce gobbler in Barry County which may have set a record for travel.

It was released Feb. 23, 1970, some 10 miles away in Stone County. It weighed 18 pounds at release.

Missouri has few out- of-state turkey hunters, but this season saw some who were really out- of- state-- even out- of- country.

Hans Tolksdorf, a school superintendent from Zanten, Germany, killed a 22 pound bird in St. Charles County, while in Missouri visiting his twin brother, Heinz, a Washington, Mo., veterinarian.

The brothers planned Hans' first trip to the United States so they could turkey hunt together. Hans said, after the successful hunt, that only a millionaire would have such a hunting opportunity in Germany.

Kenneth Henry, a retired businessman and native of Jamaica, took a 22 pound bird in Texas County. He had traveled here from his home. He has turkey hunted in southern states, but says Missouri birds are much larger.

And Jose Silva, Guadalajara, Mexico, is convinced he saw a cougar (mountain lion) while turkey hunting south of Roaring River State Park.

Silva has seen the big cats on hunts before and has hunted all over the world. There is plenty of supportive evidence-- Barry County conservation agent Charles Marrs says he has seen mountain lion tracks and said a dead deer put in the woods last winter had cat tracks all around it and eventually was dragged off.

Missouri has one known mountain lion, in the Current River country a long way from Barry County.

Jinx colt...

LOUISVILLE (AP) — If Cannonade, the new Kentucky Derby champ, were the worrying kind, he might waste away to a bag of bones looking over his shoulder and wondering when he might collide with a freight train or meet some other disaster.

He is now running in the shadow of the Hudson County jinx.

When longshot Hudson County ran second to the bay grandson of Bold Ruler in Saturday's 100th Derby, believers in the occult began conjuring up all sorts of dire portents.

Hudson County is bad news to horses who have the gall to kick dirt in his eyes.

"I don't like to talk about it, it's gruesome," said Skip Shapoff, trainer of the runner-up who was one of 10 in the field who by himself probably would have been a 100-1 shot.

"We were beaten by a horse named Near Gay in our maiden race Jan. 30 last year at Hialeah. Near Gay later was burned to death in a fire."

The youthful Shapoff paused in his recitation and looked over his shoulder furtively at the little bay colt in stall 3, barn 43 at Churchill Downs.

"Really, we shouldn't talk about it," he protested.

There was a prod from the small knot of hardy barn troopers who made the backstretch rounds on the day after.

"Then in April of 1972 there was the Layafette at Keeneland. We lose by half a length to Mr. AZ. Not long after that, Mr. AZ turns up with a twisted intestine and dies in Florida."

Shapoff was sure that was enough to satisfy any ghoul, but it wasn't.

"Well, then this year came the Wood," the trainer related. "Of course, Rube The Great won it but a horse named Friendly B finished ahead of us."

Goodness, and what in the world happened to Friendly B?

"Aw, you know," protested Shapoff. "He dropped dead just the other day at Bowie."

Shepoff glanced up toward barn 42 where trainer Woody Stephens was loading Cannonade and stablemate Judger into huge vans.

"I hope none of these air waves are floating toward Cannonade," he said.

Shapoff, personally distressed over what has befallen some of Hudson County's rivals, doesn't cotton to witches and evil spirits.

A realistic man, he knows that horse races are won on the track with speed, endurance and heart, and they're the tools of his candidate for the Preakness and Belmont lying ahead.

"This is a good little horse," he said proudly. "Alert, fiesty, aggressive. He'll nip at you but he hasn't got an ounce of meanness in him. If Cannonade had had just one little bit of trouble, I'd have the Derby champion today."

NBA playoffs even at 2 games

BOSTON (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks, noted for their mighty offense, talked of defense and the defensive-minded Boston Celtics spoke of offense as the two teams headed for Milwaukee and the fifth game of their showdown for the National Basketball Association championship.

"Our defense was a lot better, but I expected it to be as we went along," Milwaukee Coach Larry Costello said Sunday after the Bucks evened the best-of-seven series 2-2 with a 97-89 victory.

"We broke down offensively," Boston captain John Havlicek said. "We didn't have real good rhythm. Maybe we were cutting the wrong way. They played real good defense, but we were standing around and being hesitant."

Costello, looking ahead to Tuesday night's game, turned to an old cliche in saying: "Now it's a three-game series." The victory regained the home court advantage for the Bucks, but neither Havlicek nor Milwaukee veteran Oscar Robertson placed much emphasis on that.

Costello pulled a surprise in the fourth game in a move designed to break through Boston's full-court press. He started 6-foot-7 Mickey Davis, normally a forward, in the backcourt with Robertson.

"The change helped us a lot," Costello said. "We had a taller team and we also had more player power. We figured that at the very least would create problems for them. Then, of course, we had Jon McGlocklin back. Now we're able to rest people. McGlocklin is still hurting, but he's able to play."

Davis played 28 minutes and contributed 15 points, eight in the first period. McGlocklin, playing with his injured leg heavily taped, saw 22 minutes of action, scoring 10 points.

As usual, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Bucks with 34 points. Bob Dandridge hit for 21 and Robertson 10. Havlicek and Dave Cowens topped Boston with 33 and 24, respectively.

The Bucks jumped to a 14-6 lead, but the Celtics came back and the advantage seesawed. Then, with defensive ace Don Chaney on the bench with three fouls, the Bucks out-scored Boston 15-2 in a second quarter burst for a 49-39 halftime lead.

The Celtics, who hit on only 36 of 88 floor shots compared to Milwaukee's 38 of 76, closed to within two points five times in the third period before Abdul-Jabbar cashed a three-point play just before the buzzer.

The Bucks maintained their poise the rest of the way and the Celtics were unable to get closer than three points in the final period.

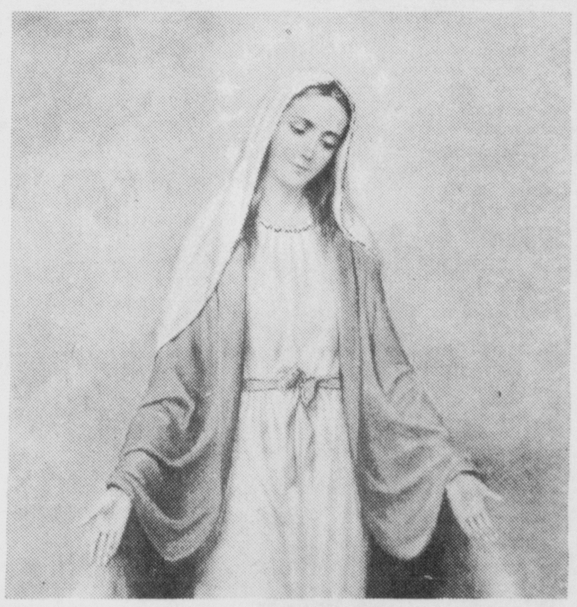
Behold Your Mother



As Jesus hung dying on the Cross, John, His beloved disciple and Mary, His mother stood beneath Him. Turning to His mother, Jesus said "Woman, behold thy son." Then He said to the disciple, "Behold thy mother."

In giving His mother to John, Jesus was giving her to all His followers and ever since that time, Mary has been acclaimed by Christians as not merely being the mother of Christ but being indeed the mother of all mankind. Mary is our mother because she is the mother of Christ and through Christ we are given new life.

For a complete treatment of the role of Mary in our lives and in the life of the Church, send for the free booklet, "Behold Your Mother."

Bruce Lee death remains a mystery

HONG KONG (AP) — A cult venerates Kung Fu film star Bruce Lee in death.

Fan letters pour in to the studio where he worked. Release of his films in many countries sets off new waves of reaction. Foreigners arrive on pilgrimages seeking an autographed photo of the American-born Lee.

Now, nine months after he died at 33, many still consider his death a mystery.

Found unconscious by a friend, he died while being taken to a hospital. A coroner's inquest ruled he was a victim of "hypersensitivity to certain drugs." But circumstances surrounding the death were riddled with questions.

Mention Lee's name in this city where he died and you are likely to be answered in hushed whispers. Everyone, it seems, has a theory — usually grounded in superstition — about the "true" cause of the star's death.

"In Hong Kong," says one resident, "you have to worry about superstitions all the time. If a house is built with the door facing in an unlucky direction, people won't move in."

A widely circulated story says Lee died because of "bad fung chi" — bad luck — brought on when he moved to a house built on the wrong side of one of Hong Kong's nine mountain, referred to as the "Nine Dragons."

Those who tell the story say Lee was warned his house was "on the wrong side of the Dragon." He took a precaution of installing a giant mirror on the roof to ward off evil spirits. If a spirit came down toward the house it would see itself and be scared away.

Last summer, the story goes, a typhoon hit Hong Kong ripping the mirror off the roof and smashing it. Shortly thereafter, Lee died.

Others have theorized that Lee died from the fight scenes for Kung Fu pictures, or that he suffered from a rare disease. There is recurring speculation — apparently unfounded — of foul play.

Lee came here as an unknown actor and rose to superstardom in such films as "The Fists of Fury" and "Enter The Dragon." Born in San Francisco and a onetime philosophy student at the University of Washington at Seattle, Lee came to Hong Kong in 1970 after producer Raymond Chou picked him for "Fists of Fury."

It was his first movie role. He had appeared in "The Green Hornet," "Batman" and "Longstreet" television series and operated a kung fu school in Los Angeles.

Executives at Golden Harvest Studios here still grieve the loss of their biggest star. At the time of his death, Lee commanded $1 million a picture in Hong Kong, where most actors make about $1,000 a film.

The zaniest baseball holdout probably was George "Rube" Ellis, crack St. Louis outfielder, back in 1908. Ellis refused to sign his contract until he got what he was holding out for -- $2.50 -- to buy a new fielder's glove!

Father charged in castration of 13-year-old son

HOUSTON (AP) — A petroleum engineer has been charged with castrating his 13-year-old son by exposing him to radioactive material.

A five-count indictment returned by a Harris County grand jury Thursday charged Kerry Andrus Crocker, 43, with castration and assault to murder, maim and disfigure his son, Kirk.

Crocker, who denied the charges, was jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond.

The indictment was served on Crocker at the end of a child support hearing Thursday at which Crocker's former wife is asking for increased payments to meet the boy's doctor bills.

Kirk, who got out of a wheelchair and used a crutch to make his way to the witness stand, testified for 90 minutes at a hearing in Juvenile Judge Robert Lowry's courtroom.

The boy testified that beginning in mid-1972 his father had placed some strange, metal, cylindrical-shaped pellets near his body while he slept at Crocker's townhouse during visitation periods.

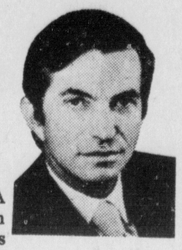
He said the pellets were found in such places as his pillow, under the sofa where he slept and in headphones connected to a television set. He said he always tried to move away from the pellets when he found them.

Barbara Smith, 42, the boy's mother, had testified earlier in the hearing that large sores appeared on the boy's ankle, right thumb and inner thighs. The sores would break open and appear to eat away at the skin and muscle tissue.

John Bible, an attorney, said the boy's testicles had deteriorated. He also said the boy needed a crutch or a wheelchair to get around and can walk by himself only 10 or 15 minutes at a time.

Crocker denied at the hearing that he deliberately exposed his son to the material, identified as cesium.

He said the material was used to log oil wells and that he had a permit issued by the State Health Department to have possession of the substance.



DR LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Safe, sane way to lose weight

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — This is my gift to all your readers who are trying to lose weight. Some time ago a woman wrote you how she safely lost 20 pounds in three months. I had tried just about everything, and this woman's advice sounded sensible, so I tried it. Like she said, I lost 20 pounds in three months, from 140 to 120 pounds. I did not count calories or stick to high proteins, as many protein foods contain some fat, too. I did not take any kind of pill. I simply ate a well-balanced meal three times a day, but reduced the amount.

I ate one serving instead of two or three, nothing between meals. At bedtime I always liked ice cream in summer and hot chocolate in winter. Instead of a dish filled to overflowing and heaped up, I cut down to two scoops. I reasoned with myself that I was eating everything I wanted or needed, only cutting the amount. I didn't run to the scales every day as this is a slow, sure method. I simply took the woman's word, followed her advice and relaxed.

Before I could weigh myself (I have no scales of my own), friends were remarking how I must be losing weight, or "Did you know you are losing weight?" I know this will hurt some advertisers' business, but like I said, it's my gift to your readers, and if they accept it and appreciate the weight lost I hope they will write you.

DEAR READER — You are another example of the wisdom of a good diet program that involves a complete and consistent correction of faulty eating habits. Congratulations.

The problem most people have with a sensible diet is that they have no patience. They want to lose weight overnight, even though it took them sometimes years to add all that fat to their bodies. As a result, they go on a fad diet, with or without success. When they have lost the weight, if they can stand the diet that long, they commonly return to their old eating habits, the very ones that caused them to get overweight to begin with. So, what happens? A large percentage of people who do lose weight gain it back.

You have to learn to eat a proper diet as a way of life to avoid obesity. In many instances this can be solved by simply cutting back on the amount of all the different foods you eat, rather than eliminating particular foods. It is not necessary to eliminate carbohydrates to lose weight, or for that matter to eliminate any food type. What you need to eliminate is calories. For more information on losing weight write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for the booklet on "losing weight." Enclose 50 cents to cover costs.

I'm glad you lost the 20 pounds, but it would have been just dandy if it had come off even slower. Anyone who needs to lose 20 pounds could easily do it as a year's program, averaging less than two pounds a month.

The only precaution I would make is don't cut back on your calories to the point that you feel too tired. Almost everyone needs a minimum of 1,200 calories a day. Less will usually cause vitamin or mineral dificiencies, unless expert diet planning is done by someone familiar with the vitamin and mineral contents of the various foods. An overly restricted calorie intake for a long period of time can harm anyone's health. For this reason I recommend sensible calorie control by simply not overeating and adding to your living pattern enough sensible exercise to help the process.

Dr. Lamb welcomes questions from his readers, but because of the volume of mail he cannot answer personally.

UMC medical students to study health issues

COLUMBIA — Missourians can expect a physician's help when they become sick or disabled but may get little help in preventing disease or in long term rehabilitation following an illness. Members of the medical school's department of community health and medical practice and the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the University of Missour- Columbia believe physicians should become more involved in the prevention of illness and in the rehabilitation process.

The departments began in January to offer clerkships for UMC medical students (from three to six students at a time) to study these issues.

Dr. Thomas J. Prendergast of community health and medical practice, who set up the clerkship plan, says it will "expose students to a range of community health problems, the identification, and possible solution, of a particular problem that suits them."

From this, he says, he hopes that the future physician will develop an awareness of the cultural, social and evnironmental factors that may predispose people to disease or interfere with their recovery.

The medical students may select a problem from a list of those known to the faculty, or they may design their own project for the eight- week clerkship experience.

Among faculty- suggested problems are:

1. Working with the hospital's ward infection surveillance officers, identifying and responding to hospital patients with infections. (Where did the infection originate? How is it being treated? Is it being treated in the best possible way?)

2. Performing follow- up on patients screened by the Missouri Heart Association and found to have high blood pressure. (One goal of this would be to reduce the number of hypertensives identified by screening but who are not currently undereffective treatment. What is effective treatment? Why don't people seek treatment after being told something is wrong? What can be done about it?)

3. Serving as patient advocates. (Students might accompany at least one patient through the hospital admissions process and spend at least a day doing much what the patient toes. They would be awakened when the patient is awakened, eat what the patient eats, be restricted to the room when the patient is restricted and accompany the patient to any X-ray or therapy treatmens prescribed -- all in order to develop an idea of the patient's point of view, to try to find out what concerns the patient and to discover what perceptions the patient has of his disease or disability.)

4. Evaluating problems of access to care. (Is the right type of health care available to all those who need it, when they need it?)

Paul Behrman, a third- year medical student has contacted former medical center stroke patients to see what problems they have encountered after leaving the hospital and returning to their homes. He says he is looking at each patient's economic situation, the family's feelings and reactions and the interest shown by the patient's physician.

Behrman will evaluate the former patients' level of functioning and the kind of ongoing program in which they are involved.

Dr. Charles R. Peterson, chairman of physical medicine and rehabilitation, says rehabilitation for stroke patients (people who have experienced paralysis of the body or of some organ of the body) includes speech, physical and occupational therapy.

He says "the goal of rehabilitation is to make people as independent as possible."

"We do that in the hospital, but when the patient returns home he is often done for, rather than doing for himself," he added.

Now, physical medicine and rehabilitation offers counseling for the family while its relative is hospitalized. Peterson says the family is also invited to go to therapy with the patient; thus the family, not just the patient, can learn about the disability and how best to deal with it.

Behrman's project may identify other problems that the stroke patients has after leaving the hospital. He hopes to find other ways doctors and hospitals can help with rehabilitation.

Medical care for stroke patients, as well as others with chronic diseases, is often "crisis- oriented." Doctors treat the immediate problem but little has been done on finding what to do after that. "All physicians recognize the problem," Peterson says, "but it's how to deal with it that we are trying to solve."

What's the law?

The case of the hoodwinked husband

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Harry was an educated man who knew everything and suspected nothing. Consequently, it wasn't until after he signed a separation agreement, in which he agreed to support "his" son, that he discovered, without question, that his son wasn't his son. What's more, the dastardly agreement was incorporated into a divorce decree that he hadn't even bothered to contest.

"I've been lumbered," raged Harry. And, in protest, he refused to make any further support payments for the child. The result? His erstwhile spouse hauled him into court and charged him with violating his obligations under the divorce decree.

"While he may decry the decree," she complained in court, "he's bound by it."

"While I may have been stupid," retorted Harry, "I'm not crazy. Nobody's going to make me support a kid that's not mine. While my philandering wife may have pulled the wool over my eyes, she can't go on fleecing me forever."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require hoodwinked Harry to continue to support "his" son?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that Harry had had every opportunity to question paternity before the divorce decree was entered. Instead, he entered into a separation agreement in which he recognized the child as his own, agreed to support the child and consented to the agreement being made part of the divorce decree which he did not oppose. At this late stage, concluded the judge, it was too late to rechart the course of the case.

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Monday, May 6, the 126th day of 1974. There are 239 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1942, in the Pacific war, the exhausted American and Philippine garrison at Corregidor surrendered to the Japanese after resisting 150 days.

On this date—

In 1856, the Austrian neurologist who founded psychoanalysis, Sigmund Freud, was born.

In 1861, Arkansas withdrew from the Union.

In 1889, the Eiffel Tower in Paris was opened as a worlds fair began.

In 1910, the Edwardian era came to an end with the death of Britain's King Edward VII.

In 1941, Joseph Stalin became premier of the Soviet Union, succeeding V.M. Molotov.

In 1955, West Germany joined the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Ten years ago: It was announced that U.S. Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara would go to Bonn to discuss West German weapons purchases from the United States.

Five years ago: A new government in Northern Ireland declared an amnesty for persons arrested in civil rights disorders.

One year ago: Mexico released 30 prisoners and flew them to Cuba, as demanded by kidnapers of the U.S. consul general in Guadalajara, Terrance Leonhardy.

Today's birthdays: Retired baseball star Willie Mays is 43 years old. Actor and director Orsen Welles is 59.

Thought for today: What this country needs is a good fivecent nickel — anonymous.

Driver escapes injury

William Lee Seals, 24, of 623 Daniel St., escaped injury when the car he was driving was struck by a southbound Frisco locomotive at 1:45 p.m. Saturday on West North Street. Police said box cars, parked on a siding near the street, blocked Seals' view of the oncoming train. The engineer was R. A. Andrews of Kennett. Police said no arrests were made. (Daily Standard photo)

Cleaning up cemetery

Spec. 5 Jimmie Jarnigan, left, and Staff Sgt. Bill Stevens, two Portageville members of Company C of the 1140th Engineer Battalion headquartered in Sikeston, survey the top of a tree to be cut down during clean- up activities at Carpenter's Cemetery about seven miles north of Sikeston near McMullin. The company spent its drill time Saturday and Sunday cleaning up the cemetery which was so overgrown with brush and trees that many of the graves markers were not visible until the brush was cleared away. (Daily Standard Photo)

Old tombstone uncovered

During clean- up activities Saturday and Sunday at Carpenter's Cemetery seven miles north of Sikeston near McMullin, many old grave markers were discovered by members of Company C of the 1140th Engineer Battalion. Some of the markers dated as far back as the 1830s, although there may have been some older ones not uncovered during the clean-up opeations. Many of the tombstones were homemade, such as the one above, and ranged from wooden crosses to a stick with a piece of plywood nailed to it with the name on it and homemade concrete tombstones. Some of the homemade stones had marbles and small ceramic figures pressed into them for decoration.

Lung Association meets in Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A demonstration of inhalation therapy was the educational part of the program at the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri's Advisory Council spring meeting held at Southeast Missouri Hospital this past week.

Bill Dubbs, inhalation therapist at the hospital demonstrated therapy equipment recently acquired by the hospital to the 36 council members and guests.

Association executive director, Mark M. Garkovich, reported that Christmas Seals returns from this year's campaign were up in comparison to last years. According to him, with the overall trend across the nation down, the totals for Eastern Missouri are evidence of community support for the programs made possible through Christmas Seal contributions.

Programs, present and future, were discussed by Murray M. Mintz, program director of the ALA of Eastern Missouri. He spoke on the need for professional education aimed at both medical and allied professionals in the area of lung disease. The council, acting in response to this presentation, appointed a committee for District IV, which is made up of the 18 counties of southeastern Missouri. Committee members are: Mrs. Sue Tippen, Butler County; Mrs. Bernice Price, Ripley County; Mrs. Betty Ross, Cape Girardeau County; Mrs. Jean Jacobs, Cape Girardeau County; and Randal Blankenship, Bollinger County.

Mrs. Jacobs was also elected to fill the term of the late Dr. Thelma Buckthorpe of Sikeston. Mrs. Edna Gibson of Cape is replacing Mrs. Dorothy New of Van Buren, who resigned from the office of secretary.

Albert Karsch, Farmington, is president of the council for District IV and serves as a board member of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri. Linus W. Bartels, is field representative for the ALA in southeastern Missouri. His address is 101 South Louisiana, Cape Girardeau, 63701, telephone: 335-8507. Area residents are encouraged to contact him or the main office at 911 Locust Street, St. Louis, 63101, telephone: 241-1554, concerning any further information about the programs of the American Lung Association of Eastern Missouri.

World news in brief

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Housewives don't have to worry about the price of bread soaring to $1 a loaf, the U.S. under secretary of Agriculture says. It's just something dreamed up by the baking industry.

"There's plenty of wheat available, more than we can use," declared J. Phil Campbell.

It's just that for the first time, the nation's bakers have had to go out and find available wheat, Campbell told The Associated Press Society of Ohio Saturday night. The government has stopped keeping track of it, he said.

"They came in and told us, 'There's no wheat,'" Campbell said. "We told them, 'It's there. You just have to go find it.'"

HARVEY, Ill. (AP) — A 71year-old professional flagpole sitter has been killed in a fall at a shopping center in this Chicago suburb.

Richard "Dixie" Blandy of Dayton, Ohio, was taking part in a promotional stunt at a shopping center Sunday when a cord connected to the flagpole was tightened, causing the pole to snap, police said.

Hospital officials said Blandy's skull was smashed and he suffered several internal injuries in the fall. He died three hours later.

A spokesman for a merchants association that sponsored the stunt said Blandy mounted the pole at 10 a.m. Thursday and had been scheduled to come down at 8 a.m. Sunday. The accident happened shortly before he was to come down.

DALLAS (AP) — A candidate who campaigned on marijuana reform in a central city area heavily populated by young persons was badly beaten Saturday in a state legislative primary race by a conservative black incumbent.

Jim Bigbee, 28, a 1972 McGovern delegate who once worked for the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws, got only 752 votes, about 27 per cent of those cast in the Oak Lawn district.

State Rep. Sam Hudson III, a Democrat who made hardly a ripple during his freshman legislative term in 1973, got 72 per cent.

Fewer than 2,000 persons voted in the contest.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Employes of a Nashville printing firm worked non-stop during the weekend setting type for an 898-page paperback book containing transcripts of President Nixon's Watergate conversations.

Bantam Books, Inc., Sunday flew the printing mats to Chicago where the $2.50-per-copy books will be printed. Bantam officials said copies will be on the newsstands in 30 key cities by Tuesday afternoon.

The Bantam version of the Watergate transcripts will be one of at least two such books being prepared. Dell Publishing Co. of New York is expected to have copies on the newsstands later this week.

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — British singer Tom Jones was prevented from leaving Venezuela when he tried to board a plane for the United States.

A local newsman, Manuel Olalquiaga of the "El Universal," got a court order against Jones for injuries allegedly inflicted by Jones' bodyguard.

Olalquiaga said David Perry struck him on the head last Wednesday. Perry reportedly left Venzuela the next day.

Jones reportedly was being delayed pending a court appearance today. A spokesman at Jones' London office said they received a call from him after he was stopped from leaving Sunday and he was "totally bewildered...."

Jones cabled Prime Minister Harold Wilson for aid. A spokesman said Wilson would be shown the cable after he returned from a trip.

A spokesman for Jones said the delay would cost him "tens of thousands of dollars because we will miss recording sessions scheduled for tonight in Alabama."

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's daughter, Mary Rockefeller Strawbridge, has been married to Thomas B. Morgan, who was a member of former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay's staff.

It was the second marriage for both. Their previous marriages ended in divorce.

The Sunday ceremony was held in the bride's Manhattan apartment.

Morgan, now the assistant to the publisher of New York magazine, was press secretary for Lindsay. He is from Springfield, Ill.

PARIS (AP) — Socialist Francois Mitterrand will face conservative Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing in a runoff battle for the French presidency May 19, France's voters decided Sunday. Backed by the powerful Communist party, Mitterrand led a field of 12 candidates on the first ballot with 10,935,763 votes, or 43.36 per cent of the total cast. Giscard d'Estaing, a member of the Independent Republican party, ran second with 8,286,382, or 32.85 per cent. The official Gaullist Party candidate, former Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, polled only 3,693,168 votes, or 14.64 per cent.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government showed no signs of yielding to Syrian demands today as it went into another round of troop disengagement talks with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. A government spokesman said a cabinet session Sunday produced no decisions on the next move. Health Minister Victor Shemtov told newsmen the cabinet would meet again today after its leaders talk further with Kissinger. Perhaps the toughest decision facing the Israelis was whether to modify their initial refusal to give up some of the territory they seized from Syria in the 1967 war. Kissinger is expected to return to Damascus today or tomorrow.

If you will save $100 a month with us for 15 years, we'll pay you $100 a month from then on and you'll never touch your principal.

When you read the chart, you can see that if you save a fixed monthly amount at First National Bank for 15 years, and you withdraw the same amount for the next 15 years, there's a nice surprise at the end of the period. You still have more money left than you put in.

That's because a First National Passbook Savings Account earns 5%, compounded quarterly. Over a 15- year period, it adds up.
